American Reporter Finds Nazis Hold Smolensk

Associated Press Writer Provides Authentic Story Of Fate of City

Reports It Is Still in Battle Zone, but Is in Ruins with Population Facing Starvation

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF
SMOLENSK, Russia—(By Telephone Through Warsaw and Berlin)—
Aug. 11 (P)—I walked through the ashes of Smolensk today on a tour conducted by German military authorities, but the ruins of this once proud city are still in the battle zone.

To the east the fighting was close enough for me to hear the boom-boom of cannon a few kilometers away. German soldiers swarmed everywhere, and overhead German battleplanes roared to and fro on their missions of death and destruction at the front.

Past the rows of fire-blackened chimneys, past ruined heaps of factories, banks and stores, past shattered walls, past the shells of homes—for that is all there is left of this historic city—rumbled trains of military trucks feeding the endless demands of war.

20,000 People Remain
Only a 20,000 remnant of the once flourishing population of 160,000 remains.

After what has happened it is a frightened, resourceless population which seeks shelter at the base of chimneys and under bits of roof and, with familiar landmarks gone, guides its movements by distinguishing features of the debris.

Standing in the expanse of devastation, I was told by a German officer that fully ninety per cent of the city was destroyed and that most of the destruction was wrought by the Russians under orders of Joseph Stalin for a "scorched earth" in the face of the enemy.

Navy Without Word from FDR

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (P)—

For the second successive day the navy failed today to receive a report from the presidential yacht Potomac, which was last reported cruising off the New England shore.

Daily dispatches, released by the navy department here, were received from the Potomac last week through Saturday. Officials said, however, that there was no hard and fast rule that such reports would be sent here. None was received yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt left on his vacation cruise on August 3 and planned to be away about a week or ten days, but the time was not definite and was subject to extension unless world events required his presence in Washington.

American Red Cross Distributes 20,000 Tons of Food to Spaniards

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ

MADRID, Aug. 11 (P)—An American Red Cross mission has completed the job of distributing nearly 20,000 tons of food, valued at $4,000,000, in six months of activity in Spain.

Col. Cary Crockett, USA retired, the energetic chief of the mission, supervised today the distribution of the last shipment of food to the Madrid area.

Another American Red Cross man now is leading a caravan of American trucks through eight Southern provinces, delivering tons of quinine and other medicines to the hospitals and clinics.

Colonel Crockett, who is 63, a retired infantryman who was campaigner or observer in almost all of the world's wars since 1898, commands six American assistants and a fleet of twenty-five American trucks.

German Troops Marching on Kiev And Southward Toward Black Sea

Berlin Reports Ukraine Highways Jammed with Retreating Russians; Rail Connections Cut

BERLIN, Tuesday, Aug. 12 (P)—German troops now are advancing on "well-paved broad highways leading straight to Kiev," Ukraine capital, while others are striking southward toward the Black Sea port of Odessa, German news dispatches said today.

Southern Ukraine highways were said to be jammed with retreating Russians—blasted steadily by waves of German planes.

How far the Germans were from these objectives was not revealed, but Berlin announced the capture of Korosten, eighty miles northwest of Kiev, several days ago, and the troops also have been attacking south of Kiev in the neighborhood of Bel Tserkov.

A reported break-through south of Uman, mid-way between Kiev and Odessa, put the Germans in a position to swing south toward Odessa, while the next most logical goal to the east was Dnepropetrovsk. Red industrial center still 200 miles from Uman.

Rail Connections Broken
One German dispatch from the front said rail connections in the southern Ukraine area were broken, with seven trains damaged, derailed or burned. Several Russian troop ships along the lower Bug river were said to have been heavily damaged.

Germans reported twenty-three Russian planes downed in air fights in the Ukraine and only one German plane lost.

Intensity of the fighting, they said, was evident in DNB dispatches that 4,000 Russians were buried at one highway intersection. At one place fifty-four tanks and 300 trucks were reported demolished by planes, with "most of the occupants dying in their vehicles."

State Political Situation Finds 'Opponents' Wary

Neither O'Connor nor Jackson Admit They Are Candidates

BALTIMORE, Aug. 11 (P)—Governor Herbert R. O'Connor and Mayor Howard W. Jackson, considered likely opponents for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1942, were noncommittal today about their possible candidacy.

The governor, told that a meeting of Democratic chieftains at Ocean City yesterday had been interpreted in some quarters as the semi-official launching of his second term campaign, said "I'd hesitate to regard it as anything so definite as that."

Mayor Jackson, asked when he would announce his candidacy, replied only with a smile. Asked for comment on the Ocean City meeting, he said:

Apparently with minimum confusion, most of Virginia changed to daylight saving time yesterday (Monday), but a few border counties and cities which remained on eastern standard schedules ran into some complications.

The Virginia alcoholic beverage control board ordered all dispensaries and licensees on daylight saving in line with the proclamation of Governor Price directing full co-operation of state departments in the changeover to "fast time," designed to conserve electric power for national defense.

The result was that licensees and liquor stores in such localities as Arlington and Fairfax counties and the city of Alexandria closed last night an hour earlier than heretofore, although the communities remained on Eastern standard time. Bristol Bluefield and Covington also remained on standard time, but Bluefield has no liquor stores or licensees and Bristol has no store.

Although the ABC board has not considered the problem of the dual times in these areas, Miller said it might consider readjusting store hours where local conditions showed justification of further changes. The board has just amended its regulation, having the force of law, fixing the closing hours for licensees at 12 midnight, daylight saving, instead of midnight, standard time, and Miller indicated it was unlikely that there would be any further change in the licensees' hours.

Plans Ready for Early Action To Resume Work on Defense Orders

Knox To Confer Today with President of Corporation and Will Issue Statement Later

(By The Associated Press)

An offer to turn its great Kearny shipyard over to the navy was made yesterday by the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company which declared it could not conscientiously accept a maintenance-of-union contract demanded by CIO strikers and recommended by the Defense Mediation Board.

Navy officials would make no immediate comment on the offer. It was announced, however, that Secretary of the Navy Knox would confer today with L. H. Korndorff, president of the shipbuilding company, and it was indicated that a statement of the navy's attitude toward the proposal would be issued after this meeting.

In some official quarters in Washington, opinion was that the government would proceed to take over the shipyard in order to get an immediate resumption of work on the $493,000,000 of naval and merchant ship contracts it holds. However, no official was willing to be quoted by name as to just what the government's plans were.

Plans Held Ready
Prior to the company's offer, a high defense official, who would not permit the use of his name, had told reporters in Washington that plans for taking over the plant were "lying ready on the desk" at the navy department.

The sole issue in the strike called by the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers last Thursday was the question of company acceptance of the maintenance-of-union clause.

The company's offices at New York disclosed its offer to the navy by making public a telegram it had dispatched to Secretary Knox. At the same time, it set forth its position in a statement which asserted that the issue was "whether the American worker shall be permitted to retain his traditional freedom of action and be allowed to determine for himself whether he shall belong to a labor union."

Report Agreement Broken
The company declared further more that the strike was called in defiance of a no-strike agreement.

In Kearny, Peter Flynn, vice president of the union local, said the union desired government operation of the yards but wanted "guarantees that our collective bargaining rights will not be impaired by the transition."

In Washington, a spokesman for Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, said:

French Relations with Germany And U. S. Apparently Unchanged

VICHY, UNOCCUPIED FRANCE, Aug. 11 (P)—

French relations with Germany and the United States apparently remained unchanged tonight after a series of weekend conferences among leading members of the Vichy government, culminating in a late afternoon full dress cabinet meeting today.

An official announcement issued after the cabinet session was concerned solely with secondary domestic problems and made no mention of decisions which authoritative circles said the cabinet had made.

But the one outstanding thing in Vichy tonight appeared to be that relations between Vichy and Washington were unchanged.

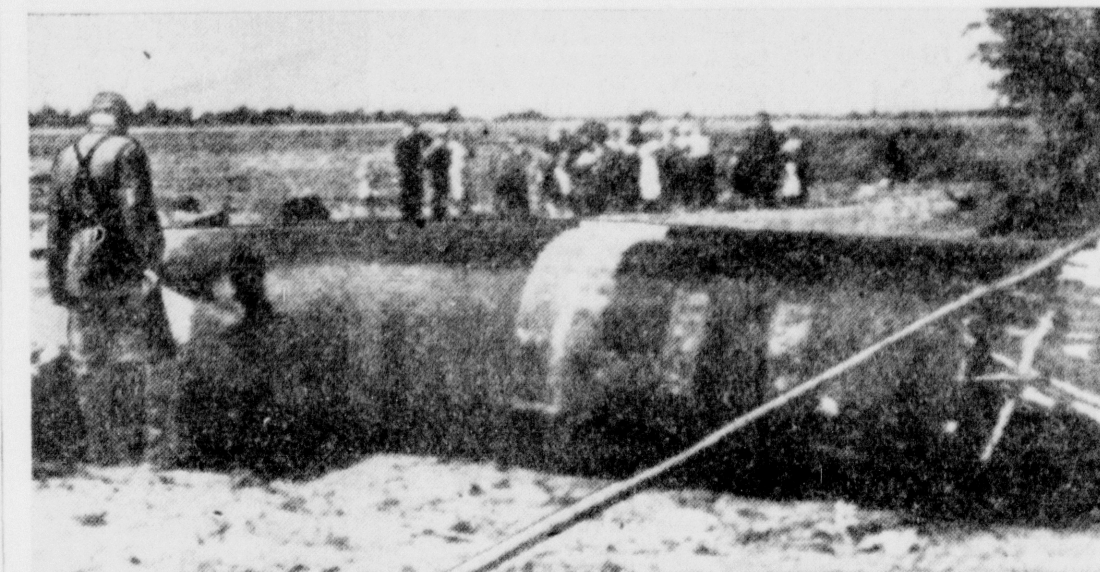

In this connection, it apparently was no question for the moment of the return of Pierre Laval, former vice premier, to power as constantly urged by the German-controlled Paris press.

Cabinet Changes

The authoritative Telemondial agency in fact declared "any ministerial shake-up properly speaking is excluded and rumors that Pierre Laval again would occupy a governmental post appear unfounded."

Authorized circles, however, referred to the possibility of other cabinet changes, such as the de-

Drastic Shakeup In Government of Turkey Probable

Foreign Minister Saragolu Likely To Succeed Saydam as Premier

ANKARA, Turkey, Aug. 11 (P)—A major shakeup in the Turkish government was rumored in political quarters tonight, with Foreign Minister Sukru Saragolu regarded as a probable choice to succeed Premier Refik Saydam.

Tevfik Rustu, according to sources close to the all-powerful national People's party, would become the next foreign minister if Saragolu becomes premier.

Rumors, persisting without official confirmation, were that independent elements in the party declared "new blood" at key posts, asserting that the European crisis required that Turkey have a dynamic leadership.

One report said that Saydam already had offered his resignation but that the party decided to postpone the changes at least until September.

Saragolu, like most Turks, is considered to have a deep suspicion

McNary Sees End of War Within Year

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 11 (P)—

Sen. Charles A. McNary of Oregon, believes the European war may end within a year.

Enroute to Washington, D. C., he said "I can see no reason for us to become involved in this war under present conditions. We can do a much better job if we keep out of it, giving all-out aid to the democracies."

McNary Sees End of War Within Year

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (P)—A proposal for an "excessive profits" tax on salaries and wages of individuals similar to that now imposed on corporate earnings evoked expressions of interest by Senate finance committee members during hearings today on the $3,236,700,000 tax bill.

It was submitted to the committee by Harcourt Amory of Boston on behalf of the Investment Bankers Association of America.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) remarked that such a tax offered the "most direct" way of reaching the incomes of those benefiting directly or indirectly from the defense program, but said that administrative difficulties might make it impracticable.

Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky.) said that he had given consideration to such a tax but that so far he had been unable to see how it could be applied effectively in practice because of the difficulty of measuring profits in individual cases.

Amory, who also proposed imposition of a "purchase tax" on non-essential articles as an alternative to proposed income tax increases, said that a tax of ten per cent might be levied on wage and salary increases made after the enactment of the legislation.

Amory recommended that the "purchase tax" exempt such purchases as food, rent, gas, electricity and children's clothing. He proposed that a five per cent

Australia Facing Grave Crisis, Menzies Asserts

MELBOURNE, Australia, Tuesday, Aug. 12 (P)—Australian Labor Leader John Curtin declared today that war was moving closer to Australia and that "the time has come when Australia asks loyal and devoted service from her sons."

MELBOURNE, Australia, Aug. 11 (P)—Australia's cabinet met in emergency session in an atmosphere of crisis today, after ministerial consultations with the heads of the armed services, and Prime Minister Menzies solemnly declared that great decisions "will have to be taken."

These decisions, he made clear, had to do with "the security of the empire and the things it stands for"—and specifically with the security of Britain's Pacific base of Singapore.

In all this, he added, not only Australia had a great interest, "but also the United States, The Netherlands East Indies and all other countries similarly placed."

The problems that had to be met by his government, the prime minister added, were "such as to call for the calmest and clearest judgment."

Referring to Japanese accusations of Anglo-American plots against Japan—without actually mentioning those accusations—he declared:

"Australia will be no party to encirclement and never has there

Proposal of Boston Banker Considered by Finance Committee

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (P)—A proposal for an "excessive profits" tax on salaries and wages of individuals similar to that now imposed on corporate earnings evoked expressions of interest by Senate finance committee members during hearings today on the $3,236,700,000 tax bill.

Russian Defense Surprises Nazis, Lieutenant Says

But German Officer Insists Reds Are Slowly Being Defeated

By LOUIS F. LOCHNER

BERLIN, Aug. 11 (P)—Fresh from Smolensk, First Lieutenant George Boness described the Russians today as "exceedingly tough fighters, excellently equipped militarily, but poorly so far as personal outfitting such as field flasks, bread bags and gas masks are concerned."

The German army, he admitted frankly, was surprised at the size of equipment and morale of the Red army but added that "the superior material, longer and more varied experience and greater individual bravery of German troops" are gradually wiping out the foe after bitter fights.

"On our march eastward the heat was hellish, the dust so thick we couldn't see the next car ahead," he recounted.

"At first the Russians, to our surprise, were slow to retreat."

Hull Sees Bad Effect If Congress Fails To Extend U. S. Army Service

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (P)—A warning that failure of Congress to extend the service of the army rank and file would have an "exceedingly bad" effect on American foreign relations came from Secretary of State Hull today as administration forces prepared for a bitter fight in the House tomorrow on an eighteen-month extension.

Hull, speaking at a press conference, authorized quotation of the words "exceedingly bad." A general reading of the newspaper headlines, he said, should emphasize that dangers to the United States exist and he recalled that he repeatedly had warned of the objectives of some nations in the direction of unlimited conquest by force.

May Mean New Votes
While most factions agreed that the House would pass some sort of legislation to keep selectees, national guardsmen, reservists and regulars in uniform beyond their present terms, democratic sponsors said Hull's statement might mean new votes for the eighteen-month compromise they agreed to sponsor in an attempt to attract votes. The House bill, as it now stands, would authorize an indefinite extension of the service but party polls indicated that proposition would be defeated. Consequently, it was decided at a conference of Speaker Rayburn, Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts and members of the military committee to seek only an eighteen-month extension, as was approved by the Senate. He also said that he would propose that the secretary of war be given authority to release from the army, upon request, persons whose retention would "subject them or their wives or other dependents to undue hardship." In an effort to complete action

Control System Hits Instalment Buying, Effects Finance Concerns

Far-Reaching Step Involves $10,000,000,000 of Credit; Exact Details To Be Announced

By IRVING PERLMETER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (P)—In a far-reaching step that brought the effects of the defense program close home to the ordinary man, President Roosevelt today set up a system of control for the huge instalment credit business carried on through the nation's banks, stores and personal finance companies.

He issued an executive order directing the Federal Reserve Board to use a World War statute and its criminal penalties to curb instalment credit used for the purchase of "consumers' durable goods."

Although not affecting the man who can afford to pay cash, the order covered merchandise and small loan business involving $10,000,000,000 of credit. Some types of those credits may be exempted, however.

Hopes To Curb Buying
The president said the regulation was intended to discourage consumers from buying many things. The aim is to conserve the materials that go into automobiles and washing machines, for instance, and also to curb inflationary tendencies.

Chairman Mortimer S. Ecles of the Federal Reserve Board said consumers durable goods meant "automobiles, washing machines, refrigerators, ironers, vacuum cleaners and many other goods." He declined to say until detailed regulations are prepared, just what other things are included. He explained it may be several days until the regulations are issued, and in

Americans Down Nazi Dive-Bomber

But German Officer Insists Reds Are Slowly Being Defeated

LONDON, Aug. 11 (P)—A California pilot officer and a sergeant from New York were credited tonight with the probable destruction of a Junkers 88 dive-bomber in the first fighting undertaken by a second all-American Eagle squadron which recently was formed within the British Royal Air Force.

Pilot Officer S. R. Edner of San Jose, Calif., and Sgt. J. Mooney, New York, were on coastal patrol when the German plane was sighted. The Air Ministry news service reported.

Firing both cannon and machine-guns, the Americans reported, that they joined the attack and last saw the German plane trailing smoke and losing speed rapidly.

The first American Eagle squadron has been promoted from patrol work to offensive fighter sweeps, and is credited with destruction of seven German planes.

"At first the Russians, to our surprise, were slow to retreat."

Red Cavalrymen Attempt To Block Advance of Nazis

Race to Ukraine Front and Battle Germans as Infantry

MOSCOW, Tuesday, Aug. 12 (AP)—Soviet cavalrymen were reported today to be racing en masse to block the Nazi drive on the Ukraine front, where the Russian communists said fighting continued unchecked.

The communists mentioned as centers of fighting the same areas the Red army had named in previous announcements: Solta, on the Leningrad front; Smolensk on the central front; and Bel Tserkov and Uman in the Ukraine.

A town of 45,000, more than half Jews, Uman is situated on the eastern slope of the Avraim hills between Kiev and Odessa. It is known in Russian history as the scene of the "Uman slaughter" of 1768 in which the town was razed and 18,000 inhabitants were slain to put down an uprising.

Fight As Infantry

A front-line dispatch to Pravda reported the cavalry movement to the Ukraine front and said that when mounted forces reach the fighting area they dismount and engage the Germans as infantry.

Commanded by mounted Marshal Semenov Budennyi, the father of the Red cavalry, the horsemen dash to the hottest sectors and then counterattack with rifles, bayonets, grenades, machine-guns and mine-throwers, Pravda said.

The cavalry formations were described as "flying infantry." One force was credited with reaching in eighteen hours a town which was three days away for infantrymen, then routing a German unit after a two-hour battle.

At another village the flying infantry was said to have wiped out nearly an entire German motorized battalion in street fighting.

Use Forest Trails

Camouflaged to escape enemy aviation and using forest trails, the cavalrymen were reported striking through gaps in the German lines and then riding away as the Germans attempted to rally superior numbers.

In the southwestern area it was reported the German had slowly gained deep into the Ukraine, but the Red army was reported still putting up an intrepid defense west of Moscow.

To the north, too, Red soldiers were reported fighting on new ground after a dearly purchased advance by the Nazis.

Use Ancient Tactics

With old-time cavalry, armor-clad knights and guerrilla tactics as well as modern armaments such as tanks, planes and automatic cannon the Red army fought desperately to hold the German panzers after already having stood up to them longer than any foe in the European war.

Especially strong was the Nazi push in the Ukraine where freezing weather may not be expected much before December.

Military quarters in Ankara, Turkey, said the Germans were putting seventy divisions, or more than 1,000,000 men, into this push alone, and British military quarters feared the Nazis were making rapid progress toward the Black Sea naval base of Odessa.

In the north the Russians admitted a slight setback to Solta, thirty miles northeast of Perekov and 120 miles southwest of Leningrad.

Reports from guerrilla leaders to the Red army headquarters told of stretching thin steel wires between trees at night to trip and kill German motorcyclists, and digging traps to catch tanks. One guerrilla leader said he had caught seven tanks in such pits.

140,000 New Freight Cars To Be Built

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (AP)—The decree giving defense orders the right-of-way over civilian needs in the nation's steel plants clears the way for building 140,000 freight cars in the next year to handle the mounting flow of defense traffic, an OPM official said today.

At the same time, two major new steps to increase steel production were reported in the formative stage at OPM.

One was to increase producing facilities by 15,000,000 tons annually, instead of 10,000,000 as recently recommended. Present capacity is estimated at 90,000,000 tons a year.

The other was to build immediately at least twenty-five Great Lakes ore boats, faster and larger than present carriers, to guarantee delivery of ore to blast furnaces at lake ports in quantities sufficient to cope with newly recommended increases in pig iron production.

The 140,000-unit freight car program, more than doubling production of the last twelve months, was reported necessary by Ralph Budd, transportation commissioner of the Office of Emergency Management.

Mirror Used To Get Fishermen Out Of Range of Guns

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Aug. 11 (AP)—A mirror has accomplished what repeated warnings failed to do for Camp Calian coast artillerymen—it cleared the waters of fishing boats in the line of fire of big guns.

Lieut. Col. Manly B. Gilson, commanding the Fifty-ninth battalion, established a one-man detail holding a large mirror in the face of the afternoon sun, which reflected the rays at the boats until disgusted operators pulled up anchors and left.

The signal flashed was a dot, dot, dash—the letter "V." Whether the letter "V" was part of a current "victory" propaganda campaign or stood for "vamosse" was not disclosed by the mirror-man.

Nazi Strategy Seen In Odessa Drive

LONDON, Aug. 11 (AP)—The German Army's double drive on the Black Sea ports of Odessa and Nikolayev may become the Reich's first major strategic triumph of the Russian campaign, informed sources said tonight and Soviet quarters here frankly were worried.

The Russians say that German occupation of these important ports might open the way to sea-borne attack on the Caucasian oil fields across the sea to the southeast.

Should combined land and sea offensives fail, they predict that the Nazis will demand right-of-way through Turkey to the Caucasus for an army reported massing in Bulgaria.

If the Turks give in, the Soviets expect British resistance from Syrian bases since German advance through Turkey would threaten Iraq and Iran as well as the Caucasus.

Odessa and Nikolayev would be valuable prizes for the Nazis. Nikolayev has extensive shipyards and there are many factories in the area which is at the confluence of the Ingul and Bug rivers, guarded by the forts of Ochakov and Kimbrun. Odessa like Nikolayev is a large wheat port.

Democracies Must Fight, Casey Says

DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 11 (AP)—Richard G. Casey, Australian minister to the United States, declared here tonight that the democracies will lose their political and economic freedom if democracy loses the war even if they never are invaded.

The Australian, who has represented this government in Washington the past eighteen months, was a speaker at the 23rd annual convention of the Iowa American Legion.

Casey asserted, "this is no more Britain's war than it is Greece's war or Norway's war or 'Brazil's war'—or your war. This is no limited war about places on a map; this is an attempt on the grand scale to make Germany once and for all master of the world."

Baltimore-Washington Traffic Tied Up

BALTIMORE, Aug. 11 (AP)—Traffic on the Pennsylvania Railroad's electrified main line between Baltimore and Washington was tied up tonight for several hours by wire trouble near Odenton, Md., the dispatchers office said.

Officials said one of the main electric wires was down, but up to midnight cause of the break was undetermined. Meanwhile, steam locomotives were pressed into service to resume train movement.

Britain Producing Kittyhawk Fights

NEW YORK, Aug. 11 (AP)—Production for England's Royal Air Force of the first of a large number of Kittyhawk fighters, the export version of the United States Army's P-40 type, was announced tonight by Guy Vaughan, president of the Curtiss-Wright Corp.

They were described as being more highly streamlined than their prototype known as the R. A. F. Tomahawk. They are fitted with an Allison engine developing 100 more horsepower than the Tomahawk and develops twenty-five per cent more gun power.

Frederick Water Supply Endangered By Break in Main

FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 11 (AP)—An eighteen-inch main carrying Frederick's water supply from the Lingoore pumping station burst today, catching the city in the midst of a summer drought.

Pressure recorded on the city hall gauge dropped from 63 to 18 pounds as water department employees rushed to a meadow east of the city to make repairs. By afternoon only two pounds of pressure had been recovered.

Fishing Creek storage dam, now two feet below normal, is virtually the only source of supply left to the city pending repairs in the Lingoore main which officials said may take several days.

Two corn canning factories, approaching peak production for the season, were hampered by the sharply diminished supply of water. A third factory is scheduled to open Wednesday.

Time Bomb Found In York Social Club

YORK, Pa., Aug. 11 (AP)—A time bomb that failed to explode was found today in a building occupied by a social club and a print shop.

Daniel J. Boas, state motor police bomb expert, said that only a thin coating of lacquer on the bomb's detonator had prevented explosion, the lacquer, he said, acted as insulation.

The bomb, composed of three ounces of nitro-glycerin in a bottle, a battery, an alarm clock and a shotgun shell as a detonator, was assembled in a cigar box.

It was discovered under the steps leading to the second floor which is occupied by the print shop of Eugene Shuman, The Yankee Club occupies the first floor and basement.

Detective Orie Gosnell said he had found no motive for placing the bomb in the building and added:

"I believe the bomb was delivered to the wrong address. I feel it was intended for the building occupied by another organization in the same area."

He did not identify the other organization.

Smolensk since the Germans captured it July 16. (The Russians never have admitted losing the city, and as recently as last week claimed to be still holding on there.)

Other Towns Desolate

Minsk and Vitebsk—our plane flew over those places—appeared desolate enough but not so utterly devastated as Smolensk.

In between the larger cities were hundreds of straw-thatched villages which seemed almost untouched. And between the villages stretched many miles of golden gleaming fields where peasants still were at work gathering the harvest. The crops were too green to burn when the Germans came.

Many of the workers are women, barefoot, bronzed and sturdy, carrying on oblivious of the war that is sweeping in fiery torrents about them.

The parts of the front I visited naturally were comparatively quiet, but the German air force was flying about, observing, photographing, directing the fire of artillery, spotting Russian troop movements, telling the German tanks and troops where to go, warning them of counterattacks, and advising them of weak spots in the Russian lines.

Russians Not In Air

The Russians did not seem to be in the air.

One wonders what the winter will bring when the bitter winds sweep around these bare chimneys. There may be enough grain to feed most of the rural population, but what will the people of the towns do?

An effort is being made by civilian organizations springing up to relieve what is sure to be agonizing distress.

I found the German commander of Smolensk eating a thick soup from a dirty tablecloth spread in what once was the directors' room of a savings bank. He has appointed a Russian lawyer, who secretly had been an anti-Communist, as burgomaster.

"It is true but we haven't made any date," he told newsmen.

Reynolds, who is 57 years old, said any additional information would have to come from Mrs. McLean, widow of Edward B. McLean, former Washington newspaper publisher who died recently.

It will be the North Carolina Senator's fifth marriage. Two of his marriages were ended by divorce while two of his wives died.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 11 (AP)—Today was the day Ralph Grandinetti had set for posting publicly the names of persons six months or more behind with their grocery bills.

Instead he put a new sign in the window: "Due to the favorable results obtained here, we feel it unnecessary to continue this blitzkrieg against dead-beats."

Grandinetti happily announced more than $200 of $1,200 in delinquent accounts had been paid since the warning was posted two weeks ago. The grocer got the idea from a fellow storekeeper at Monongahela, Pa.

Burns Prove Fatal To Five-Year Old

WESTMINSTER, Md., Aug. 11 (AP)—Matilda Jane Lang, five-year-old daughter of Mrs. Myrtle Miller Lang of Westminster, died yesterday in a Baltimore hospital as a result of burns received when her clothing caught fire from matches she was playing with in her home.

She is survived by her mother and one brother and one sister. Her father was the late Thomas Lang. Funeral services will be held from the home Wednesday morning with burial in the St. Paul cemetery, Arcadia.

Sentenced To Die, But Must Fill Out Draft Questionnaire

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 11 (AP)—Although Wayne Thompson, 24, is under sentence to die Sept. 16 in Ohio penitentiary's electric chair for the holdup slaying of a Columbus grocer, he must fill out his selective service questionnaire tomorrow, Warden Frank D. Henderson said today.

"Guess I won't have to worry about that," commented Thompson.

Full Economic War Footing Is Ordered in Japan

Konoye Government Invokes Provisions of Mobilization Act

TOKYO, Aug. 11 (AP)—Japan put herself on a full economic war footing today under the general mobilization act while her returning minister to Washington bluntly counseled his people that "the United States is prepared and determined to meet the worst eventualities."

The diplomat, Kaname Wakasugi, at Los Angeles on his way home conferred on the "delicate issue" of Thailand, gave a trans-Pacific telephone interview which pictured the United States and Japan as each unwilling to "start anything" but stressed American preparedness under a "definitely changed" attitude toward Japan.

By deciding today to invoke in full the provisions of the general mobilization act the Konoye government took full regulatory charge of Japanese economic life. Typical of the controls to be set up were those over the stock exchange and marine transport.

Economic Mobilization

"The mobilization act, which became law in May, 1938, provides a parallel in an economic sense of military mobilization. It confers on the government unlimited power to draft manpower for industry and all economic resources. Roughly, the act permits all constitutional checks on executive action to be set aside."

The Wakasugi interview, prominently published in the Tokyo newspaper Nichi Nichi, coincided with an editorial in the big business newspaper, Chugai, saying that Japanese-American relations were deteriorating and that only two steps remained before a possible break: A complete embargo and severance of consular relations. The last would be a likely prelude to a diplomatic break.

Never before had Chugai spoken so pessimistically; seldom before a Japanese diplomat given such a sharp delineation of Japanese-American relations.

Wakasugi, the Japanese minister interviewed by telephone from Tokyo, mentioned Germany once, saying that the United States was suspicious of anything Japan might do in the far east in collaboration with Germany.

Developments Expected

At London, Reuters, the big British news agency, received a cryptic dispatch from Tokyo saying that "important developments"—nature unspecified—were expected there shortly. The expectation was linked to return to the city of the United States and British ambassadors, Joseph C. Grew and Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, presumably from a week-end out of town.

Observers at Peking, North China, expressed conviction that Japan might move any day against Siberia rather than Thailand where she is reported to have been demanding bases and other concessions while consolidating positions in neighboring French Indo-China.

Foreign military sources at Shanghai agreed that Japan was mobilizing a great striking force in Manchukuo but persons at Shanghai usually well informed expressed belief that Japan would act only if European Russia seemed near collapse.

The best available estimates at Peking were that Russia still held a normal force of 500,000 effectives in Siberia while Japan, it was said, probably had doubled, if not tripled, the normal 250,000-man Kwangtung army with which Japan garrisons Manchukuo.

Reports from the southern part of Japan's envisioned "co-prosperity" sphere, however, indicated no lessening of tension in Thailand and the British Malay states.

A Singapore report said that Japanese nationals were leaving Singapore by International Express to Bangkok, enroute home as a result of British credit freezing, while the Japanese government was reported to have been asked to furnish a ship to remove 300 others from Singapore. Fifty-five American evacuees from Japanese-dominated French Indo-China, meanwhile arrived at Manila, enroute home.

Two Small Children Burn to Death

TAKOMA PARK, Md., Aug. 11 (AP)—Two small children searching for their pet kitten were burned to death in a paper-filled shed back of their home today as their mother and six brothers and sisters looked on helpless to aid them.

The victims were Alice Mae Seek, 5, and her sister, Katherine Irene, 4, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Seek.

Montgomery county police said the fire apparently began when the girls struck matches in an effort to locate their pet.

The shed, attached to a large barn near the Seek home, was filled with newspapers the children had collected to sell to a junkman, neighbors said.

When firemen reached the scene the wooden shed was enveloped in flames and rescue of the children was impossible.

WINCHESTER, Va., Aug. 11 (AP)—Window shopping is too tame for three-year old Jerry Headley.

While his dad, Amos Headley, was looking in a Main street window, Jerry disappeared. An hour later he was located in a front row seat at a western motion picture.

Control System

the meantime consumers can still buy on whatever terms business men are willing to sell.

At that time, he said, the board will issue a list of regulated items. After a date yet to be selected, it will be unlawful for anyone to sell those items on any credit terms except those specified by the board. In addition, the board expects to regulate small personal loans. The penalties for violations will be a maximum of ten years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Larger Down Payments

"The form of the controls was left vague temporarily, but the president specifically authorized such measures as requiring down-payments in cases where they are not necessary now, requiring larger than usual down-payments in other cases, requiring larger monthly or weekly payments and reducing the length of time that payments can run."

Whatever form the new rules may take they will not apply to credit contracts entered into prior to the effective date of the rules. The order does not apply to cash transactions.

The board intends, at least at first, to limit only installment credit—not open charge accounts, those due to be paid in lump amounts.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his order, said the regulations were necessary because "liberal terms for such credit tend to stimulate demand for consumers' durable goods the production of which requires materials, skills, and equipment needed for national defense" and because "the extension of such credit in excessive volume tends to generate inflationary developments of increasing consequence."

Sees Aid After Emergency

Eccles added that the new regulations would help the nation over the industrial lull after the emergency, because people would have gone without so many things that their purchases would give factories something to turn out.

The regulations will be administered through the existing federal reserve machinery throughout the country. Heads of the twelve Federal Reserve banks were called to meet on the matter Thursday. Friday, the board will listen to representatives of stores, finance companies, banks and others.

Eccles said the only items definitely excluded from the regulatory system were loans for the purchase or construction of new homes. Loans to finance repairs of an existing house may be regulated, however.

Will Curb Small Loans

Although the controls will be aimed, generally, at the use of credit for the purchase of goods, Eccles said that "installment credit to obtain cash in relatively small amounts will be covered by the regulation since this type of credit is so closely related to the purchase of articles of the kind listed."

Statisticians said it was difficult to estimate how much credit business was affected. At present, they said, there is about $10,000,000,000 of consumer credit outstanding. About $5,000,000,000 of this represents debts on merchandise bought on the installment plan—about half of this is owed on automobiles, alone. Another $2,000,000,000 of the total represents small cash loans of the type to be regulated.

Favors Compulsory Savings

About the time the presidential order was being issued Leon Henderson, head of the office of price administration, expressed belief Congress would have to consider some form of compulsory savings to help drain off excess purchasing power in the hands of the public and thereby further reduce the danger of inflation.

Continuing his testimony before the house banking committee in support of the administration's price control bill, Henderson said that due to the probable delay in the effectiveness of the new tax program, he thought the treasury's sale of defense bonds should be stimulated and the social security program revised to take in more money from both workers and employers.

"Then, compulsory savings in some form will have to be considered," he said.

tax be imposed on articles falling between the classification of necessities and luxuries with a ten per cent tax on luxury items.

He estimated that such a tax would produce $602,200,000 more revenue per year than the predicted yield for the House-approved bill.

Invasion of Russia An Error for Hitler, Joseph Davies Says

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 11 (AP)—Joseph E. Davies, former ambassador to Russia, declared today that "Hitler's first big mistake was when he doppelcrossed Josef Stalin and invaded Russia."

"It is the beginning of the end," he told a luncheon group.

Davies said Russia's total income last year was $14,800,000,000, which was thirty per cent above all British income and more than double the United States' tax bill of $6,300,000,000. Russia spent $7,000,000,000 for defense last year, he added.

"Hitler has for the last year and a half been trying to bring about a peace that would permit him to get stronger," Davies continued. "Evidence is overwhelming that to talk peace to Hitler is to sell our freedom, liberty and individualism in the United States."

ment, said that an executive order presumably would have to be issued by President Roosevelt before the navy could take over the Kearny plant.

Defense labor officials indicated that if the government took over the plant the workers would be switched from the company payroll to the Navy's payroll and that federal operation probably would continue for the duration of the emergency.

Two other labor disputes also were matters of particular concern to defense officials.

Strike at Allentown

The CIO United Automobile Workers began a strike at the Mack Manufacturing Company, Allentown, Pa., because union officials said, the management refused to agree to Aug. 4 as the retroactive date for a demanded fifteen cents an hour increase in wages. The current scale ranges from 64 to 95 cents an hour.

Mack employs 4,700 and has orders for several million dollars worth of gun carriages, tank parts and trucks for the army.

AFL machinists continued on strike at the Caldwell, N. J., plant of Curtiss-Wright Corporation propeller division which has $100,000,000 of defense orders. The management reported the plant was open and operating, but a union spokesman said only fifty of the 800 day shift production workers had gone through picket lines.

A Distrust That Should Be Removed

FURTHER STEPS in the interest of self-defense will in all likelihood have to be taken by this nation, in the opinion of Mark Sullivan, by reason of the fact that the war is being brought closer to the United States. And he added "in the steps the war makes necessary, Mr. Roosevelt and the country would be greatly served if he would bring about a greater spirit of trust between himself and Congress."

Mr. Sullivan might well have extended that hope to include the people as well as Congress. Why is it that the president has permitted such distrust to prevail, to allow feuds, bitterness and bad feeling to retard defense production? Frank R. Kent has supplied answers in his Baltimore Sun column. For one thing, there is the presidential desk bottleneck. Mr. Roosevelt has denied that it exists, but Kent says that it does, nevertheless.

"Appealing to the country for national unity," Kent then says, "the people have seen Mr. Roosevelt yields first to the farm lobby and then to the labor lobby. They find him warning of the danger of inflation and yet refusing to take the obvious steps to avert it. They see him fumbling with the vital price-control problem, shrinking from placing any limit whatever upon farm prices and wages, without which the whole effort to control prices becomes absurd. They see him, with a belated and feeble protest, permitting a politically inspired tax bill to take shape, and they know that he has violated his own recommendation that every non-defense expenditure be cut to the bone."

Further, they know that he has allowed the federal finances to get out of control; that he persists in keeping incompetent men in important positions; that he has done nothing to check the radical New Deal group, bent upon using the crisis to promote their State-socialization plans."

All these things, and more, as Kent says, are known and beyond dispute. Whereupon, as Mr. Sullivan aptly observes, the country would be greatly served if the president should act to move these causes of distrust, not only as between himself and Congress but also as between himself and his people.

Road Contracts Again Miss Allegany County

PROMISES made by the state road authorities weeks ago that the long-delayed improvement of Route 40 between Frostburg and Cumberland would be started "within sixty days," are not anywhere disclosed in the report covering the quarter up to the first of this month just submitted by Maj. Extra B. Whitman, chairman of the State Roads Commission, to Governor O'Connor.

According to the report, construction work on both highways and bridges has been "moving ahead in full swing as per schedule." A list of state and county projects let by contract during the period totaled an expenditure of $4,995,107.11, of which $4,609,705.15 covered state and $385,401.96 covered county work. That made a total of approximately $7,000,000 in contracts put out by the commission for around fifty projects since the first of the year. In addition, bids have been advertised for construction of a grade separation cloverleaf project near the Glenn L. Martin plant, Baltimore, at a cost of more than half a million dollars.

Thus the quarterly list of projects again passed up Allegany county, perhaps "as per schedule," although Western Maryland did receive a bit of work, including a contract involving $408,466.26 for a road between Antietam creek and Hagerstown, one involving $14,679.50 for a floor on a bridge over Deep Creek lake and one involving $13,954.88 for the Hagerstown-Middleburg pike.

Protests by Frostburgers that this section has not been receiving the consideration it deserves in road expenditures are thus seen to be well grounded.

With consumer rationing of motor cars, rubber tires and gasoline now feared, a man may have to practice twiddling his thumbs again on Sunday afternoon.

The United States is building pocket fortresses. This is the first national defense project which is named for the source from which the funds for it came.

A Chicagoan named Harris has had his name changed back to Haralampopoulos. The war, it seems, has made unpronounceable monickers fashionable.

Two Words

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I may be getting old and fussy, but I've developed a grudge against a pair of words. Whenever I hear them, I feel the hair standing up on my neck. I curl up inside, I give a low growl like a sleepy dog that's being teased.

It's too bad about me, of course. I suppose I've fallen out of step with the modern world. But nevertheless I don't like to hear a man saying "I sold myself to that prospect and put the deal over in a hurry."

The two words I don't like are "Selling Yourself." Our grandfathers used them. They didn't even know what they meant. They called the seas and plowed the land if they were merchants they sold things, not themselves.

I've had young fellows try to sell themselves to me. They smiled made pleasant talk, seemed very interested in my affairs and in me, and made me think what fine young men they were and how much they liked me. And when they heard me putting, they got down to business and began their selling talks. They put business on a personal basis. They made a refusal seem like an insult to an intimate friend. And they made me MAD. When I said "no" they looked hurt, like trusting children who'd just been told there isn't any Santa Claus. And that made me twice as mad!

One of those disappointed salesmen complained to a friend of mine that he was afraid I hadn't liked his personality. His personality had nothing to do with my decision. He'd failed to sell in my family because at that time we didn't need what he was trying to sell.

I don't see why any man should throw himself in as a bonus when he's selling a useful article. I don't get that idea at all. It gives me the creeps. And if you give me my choice of salesmen, I'll take a grumpy old shoe clerk I used to know who growled and said hardly a word but sold us shoes and saw they were well-fitted and took our money and said good-by. He could have been more polite but at least he was selling us shoes and not himself!

Ickes Tries New Monkey Wrench With No Success

BY PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Mr. Ickes, having been left at the post in the race for control of the rich new power defense program, called for another race of his own devising in a private few days back.

Paul Mallon

You will recall, in the first one, Chairman Leland Olds and his Federal Power Commission ran off with the high voltage stakes while Mr. Ickes was still in the stable. Mr. Ickes rushed a comprehensive plan for power expansion to the White House before Ickes could get there with a substitute. Thereupon Mr. Ickes denounced the winner's report as a hedge-podge. He stopped this direct denunciation method of attack after one stab, but it was generally expected he would be back again with something new shortly.

Committee Called

True to form, this past week, Secretary Ickes called a meeting of something called the Federal Power Policy Committee, of which he is chairman. He is supposed to have dominated it in the past through his legal counsel, Ben Cohen, although the latest Congressional Directory says the counsel post is vacant. And Ickes' control may have been vacated as well. Committee vice chairman is Mr. Olds and the members are government officials, Carmody, of Federal Works Agency; Chairman Elcher, of SEC.; TVA Director Dave Lilienthal; Harry Slattery, REA administrator; War Under-Secretary Patterson, RFC Chairman Schram, Bonneville Dam Administrator Paul J. Raver.

As soon as Chairman Ickes had called the meeting to order, one of the Ickephants present offered a proposal. (Note—Ickephants is not my word but that of some government officials to describe the little clique of former SEC attorneys who are hovering around Ickes trying to make him power czar so he can Ickesate the power situation as he is now Ickesating the oil industry and motorists. It rhymes with sycophant in more than one way.)

Not Very Subtle

The proposition was not very subtle. It was that the Power Policy committee be made the central agency for the defense power program and that all projects be submitted to the committee for approval and coordination. According to the Ickephants who backed the idea, it would make each of the agencies represented on the committee (FPC, FWA, TVA, etc.) agents of the committee. Just incidentally (although no one mentioned this) it would take the chairmanship of the prize away from Mr. Olds and give it to Mr. Ickes.

Now no official here likes to engage Ickes in controversy, for reasons which must be so widely apparent by now as not to require statement, but this was a little too much. One daring member of the committee (not an Ickephant) boldly contended the federal agencies were established by act of Congress and therefore it was legally impossible to make them agents of Ickes committee. Set up by statute, they could not be agents of another organization.

On this note, the meeting adjourned "indefinitely," that is, with no future meeting scheduled.

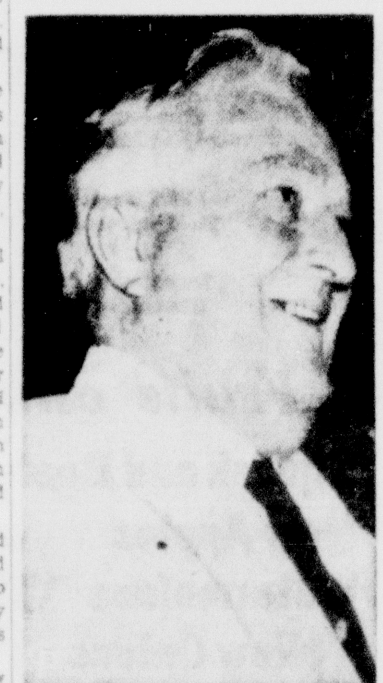

Third Attack Expected

Proponents of the Olds plan, including the OPM defense power experts, retired to await Ickes' third assault, which they expect shortly, hoping the next one will show some improvement in cleverness as well as practicability over the first two.

But the problem of how to steal the show from Olds is not going to get any easier for the Ickephants. Olds is supposed to have received some RFC money already and is going ahead with his program, construction to start at once.

the government calling loudly for unity among its people.

Stiffer Taxes Seen

Get set for a stiff further upping of the tax bill in the Senate Finance committee, not only broadening the income tax base but expanding nuisance taxes. Mr. Morgenthau's testimony represented a change of administration policy front. Finance Chairman George is agreed. Fact is the so-called defense expenditures this fiscal year (it began July 1) will be $22,000,000,000. When the House wrote the $3,500,000,000 revenue raising bill, expenditures were calculated at only $19,000,000,000. If the treasury was to carry out its program of raising two-thirds of the money by taxes (rest by borrowing) the Senate would thus have to add nearly $2,000,000,000 to the bill. It won't add that much, but the situation will require broadening the base, to bring in new small income taxpayers in bulk.

Nazis Avoid Plants

Strangely, the Germans are not bombing the famous large Red hydroelectric power dams which would seem to be the best and easiest industrial targets. Here the authorities believe the Nazis are deliberately saving these for their own use later, as they saved some roads in Poland.

Limited Occupation

Nazi plan for administering a conquered Russia is supposed to call for occupation of the half dozen key industrial cities, power centers, railroads. Rest of the country can't be garrisoned. If the Germans can destroy the Russian army, they figure they will be reasonably safe from important counter-attacks even if minor segments of the Red army escape east of the Urals.

Religion and Democracy

By Lawrence C. Martin, Managing Editor of The Denver Post

Religion is an essential of our democracy for the reason that it is today the one remaining champion of the sanctity and integrity of human personality.

Religion is the only remaining hope of the preservation on earth of any substantial degree of human liberty.

That assertion is made because of a conviction which many thoughtful men everywhere share, that human intelligence has failed to evolve a satisfactory formula of life though many forms have been tried.

The society which will evolve in the future, if democracy is to be preserved, will continue to regard man's personality as sacred, and his relations with God as his own affair, but it will acknowledge that the principles of religion, since the days of Abraham and before, are the essential principles of human well-being.

It is thought that the Jews learned the art of wood carving from the Egyptians during their captivity.

But it is more accurate to say supposed that two-fifths of the United States Senate lack either the wish or the will to resist Hitlerism and make the resistance effective.

Opposition in Congress to extending the draft period, expresses a wide gamut of attitudes. Some of it is a kind of parliamentary protest. But it is not protest against building up an effective army, and doing it quickly. It is not protest against the administration's foreign policy as a whole. In the case of many an opposition congressman, if he felt that his one vote would result in postponing the army's effectiveness, he would not vote that way. He feels free to vote opposition, just because he knows opposition will not prevail.

A Frequent Happening

This sort of thing happens often, about every sort of question, in every parliamentary body. And often the men who vote this way include some of the best intelligence in the body. They think it wise there should always be an opposition group, and that the morale of the group be maintained by taking the opposition group position, when doing so will work no harm to good purposes. Often what is called an opposition vote is actually, and merely, a vote of criticism. Sometimes, in our Congress, it is a serving notice on the president that his policies are subject to scrutiny, that he must not feel he has such a mandate as might tempt to recklessness.

Some of the opposition to the draft extension which Mr. Roosevelt asked was not opposition to that measure merely. It was symbolic. It symbolized criticism of the president's course generally, including especially his course about domestic matters. Concretely, this opposition expressed in part a deep feeling, practically universal in Congress, that some about Mr. Roosevelt would use the emergency of war as a blind to bring about change in our form of society and government, including great increase of power in the executive, to the detriment of the power of the representative body. It was the same with the Lease-Lend bill. Some of the opposition to that was not opposition to more help for Britain; it was opposition to more power for the presidency and apprehension lest this power might be used not merely for the emergency of war, but be entrenched and made permanent.

Protection, Axis Style

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Japan, says the inspired Japanese press, defending the advance into Indo-China, is engaged in a "cooperative defense" of Asiatics against the white race.

This pious declaration would carry much more weight were it not for some stubborn historical facts. It is difficult, for example, to square it with the conquest of Manchuria and the long and bloody war on China. Nor do we see precisely how an alliance with the Germans who are so inordinately proud of their white blood, can be considered a cooperative operation against the white race.

Those Asiatics who have not yet felt the iron of Japanese oppression would do well to reject all offers of "cooperation" if they are sufficiently strong to do so. They will find that the protection Japan offers them is the protection she has given Greece and Czechoslovakia and other conquered Nations, the protection Russia gave Finland and Germany and Russia between them gave Poland.

If there is anything plain in this uncertain world of today, it is that the helping hand of the Axis is the embrace of the python.

Army Should Not Get the Convicts, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Too frequently these days the press reports some judge offering probation to a convicted criminal if he will enlist in the army or navy. The most recent case which the local recruiting officer protested vigorously was in Los Angeles where the prospective probationer was rejected at the recruiting officer for moral unfitness.

Hugh S. Johnson

This touches an important and many-angled subject of national interest. At the outset, it is plain that this judicial practice is altogether vicious. The moral character of this new draft army is the highest ever known. It is an affront to the army and to every selectee to have this call to service placed by a judge on a level only a little less low than a jail sentence. It could be just cause for apprehension of families and friends to think that these boys were being taken into an association composed, in part at least, of jail-sweepings or something very close to it. Such action may not produce an effect, but it is in the direction of an effect, to destroy the institution of selective service in America as did in England during the reign of the Stuarts.

Liability Intrinsic

The idea of absolute liability to military service is intrinsic in Anglo-Saxon law. The methods applied during the Stuart fight with Parliament degraded and destroyed it. Jails and even asylums were emptied to recruit armies. The press gangs took the poor and friendliness by force just as later, under the Georges, American seamen were impressed. The idea of conscription became so hateful in England that it has not even yet been as completely accepted either there or in Canada as it has here. We can't countenance even a start in that direction.

About the present automatic exclusion, on the ground of "moral unfitness" of men who have served their punishment and are no longer charged with crime is a more difficult question. If such a man who can show a subsequent record of good conduct, can't serve his country, there is little merit in the supposed corrective value of our penal system.

Plenty of Examples

Some of these ex-bad boys have done marvelous military exploits. There are plenty of examples in the French Foreign Legion where "no questions are asked." It is tradition, at least, that a goodly number of the sailors of Columbus on the first discovery voyage were ex-convicts, if not worse.

With, perhaps, some idea of the presence of such characters in both the Legion and the crews of the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria, the discipline was brutal. It is no condition to be encouraged at any time, but there is a real cause to question the automatic exclusion of any and all convicts on the ground of moral unfitness.

In the hope of not being misunderstood, let me repeat that these considerations do not apply to the apparently growing practice of judicial offerings to suspend or withhold punishment for crime if the convict will promptly enlist.

Would Encourage Crime

In addition to the other reasons here given, that practice could actually encourage the commission of minor crimes to escape the draft. That is not far-fetched. There are authenticated cases of men having their principal teeth extracted or otherwise maiming themselves to be rendered physically unfit. It is not hard to imagine a mind with that kind of fear or abhorrence of military service practicing a mild larceny, robbery or arson, expecting a short sentence for the first offense in place of an indeterminate hitch in the army or navy.

I have actually seen that happen, too, in slightly different circumstances. An otherwise model soldier who felt, for some private reason, that he must have his discharge and couldn't purchase it, committed about the worst military offense—direct disobedience of orders—expecting a light sentence and discharge. He got ten years. This is a very serious subject.

Don't Run When Afire

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

There is a lesson parents should get across to their children, namely, that if ever their clothing should catch fire the worst thing to do is run. Running only fans the flames, making them burn more fiercely. The better thing to do is lie down and roll. If in the home, grab a rug or coat and roll it up. That will help smother the fire.

Not many children know what to do in the fire emergency unless their elders have taught them. Sometimes the older folks forget that to run is dangerous.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Draftee Is Puzzled

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"What's the matter with these babes, anyhow. Are they all goldiggers or worse, square-cut diamond miners?"

"I've been in love with a girl for ever so long, but as I had to help out at home I never had the courage to ask her to become engaged to me. Well, the lady herself settled that difficulty, and we were engaged, and I was the happiest fellow in the whole world."

"She told some of her friends about our engagement, and they gave us a party, and when we got there they all wanted to see her square-cut diamond, if you please. Well, that got her terribly upset and she said I hadn't got round to selecting one yet. On the way home she cried and took on, saying that she really would have to have a ring or she would look ridiculous."

"I thought real love meant more than engagement rings, even diamonds. I hadn't much money saved and I didn't want to leave my mother strapped, so I told my girl I would give her a ring but I was afraid it couldn't be a diamond. More tears. Now what's she after? A diamond ring or what?"

Puzzled Draftee

While you haven't told me this girl's age, I suppose the way she acted about the ring proves that she's just young and silly, and is so much influenced by girls as silly as she is. Millions of people become engaged with no thought of a ring, or if they do have one, compromise on something less expensive than square-cut diamonds. If she continues to nag you about it, it will indicate she's not the right girl for you after all.

Sweet Sixteen Is Troubled

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I'm 16 years of age and in love with a boy nine years older. He took me out often and said he loved me and hoped to marry me some day. Of course, I thought he was serious. Then he was drafted and a farewell party was given for him. I was there, but he ignored me and brought another girl."

Allegany County P-TA Council To Hold Meeting

Mrs. G. R. Clements, State President, Will Address Institute

Mrs. G. R. Clements, Annapolis, was here yesterday conferring with Mrs. John E. Lancaster in her home, 624 Shriver avenue, as to a program for the Institute which the Allegany County Council, Parent-Teacher association will sponsor, September 30 at the Central Y. M. C. A. Meetings will be held in the morning and afternoon and dinner will be served in the evening followed by the closing meeting.

The Institute is to inform people on the movement and work of the Parent-Teacher Association.

Mrs. Lancaster is president of the Allegany County Council, Parent-Teacher, Mrs. Clements is president of the Maryland Congress of Parent-Teacher.

I found out he has been going "steady" with her, but he never even mentioned her to me.

When he was home on a ten days' leave he came over to see me, and even kissed me. And when I went out to tell him goodbye I saw he had the other girl in the car with him.

My mother and girl friend tell me to forget him, but I can't. I will take your advice.

A Serious Sultor

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I'm 18 and he's one year older. We live 250 miles apart so I have seen him only during summer vacations for the past three years."

Whenever I visit in his home town he dates me every night. He has told me he enjoys being with me more than with anyone else. He's a very serious type, polite, and never jokes."

On my last visit to his town, I happened to say during the course of a conversation, that my "crowd" only went around together for the fun we got out of it. He said nothing, but just kissed me goodbye when I left. Later, at home, I received a letter saying he knew now that there could never be anything between us but a good, solid friendship, but perhaps I hadn't given it a thought as my friends and I were always having fun."

In the same letter he tells me he counts the days we're apart and hopes we'll have many more good times together. What do you make of him?"

D.

He must be lacking in a sense of humor. This is confirmed by his writing that you could only be friends after you had told him that your crowd were not serious and went around together "for the fun" you got out of it. A group of young people, all deadly serious would be a very dull group, indeed. When he tells you he counts the days you're apart, it shows that he would be upset if you took him at his word and regarded him only as a friend. His trouble, I think, is youth. "Older and wiser" is the universal remedy.

Possibility that Screen Actress Rosalind Russell has eloped to Las Vegas, Nev., has arisen after the report of a Hollywood policeman that he had given her a ticket for speeding and that she told him she was in a hurry to reach Las Vegas. Backache, Leg Pains May Be Danger Sign Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking your waste and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging headaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, backaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with stinging and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Castle of Contentment

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

"WHY, PERCY, I'm ashamed of you," Ylena remarked when Percy told her $3,500 would not buy the shop in the advertisement. She smiled a secret little smile. "Surely the price Mr. Cromwell gave over the telephone this morning still holds good."

In stony silence Percy O'Neil watched his client rapturously survey the shop and the second floor living quarters. "I'll take it," she told him as she again walked through the spacious showroom. The waiter had been right; it was completely desirable, standing on the corner where Main boulevard merged with the quiet, socially select Alvarado road.

"This check," she told him, "is signed by me, not Theodore Vincent. And now, I'd like a look at that eyesore."

Percy showed his opinion of her beauty by his facial disdains; nevertheless, he took her at her word for a half hour watched her step through dusty, spider-webbed, black-lotus rooms and across black lots, filled with tin cans and trash. When she said she would buy the place, he was dumbfounded, but rushed her to the Cromwell offices to make the necessary arrangements.

At last, when he escorted her to her car, he asked, "Would you mind telling me what you intend doing with those vile huts?"

"Not at all. First a live bath, then new plumbing and decorations. From ten dingy shacks I'll make twenty units as immaculately compact as pullman sections. I've read how hard it is for school children to get rooms. I'll have room for 20 and free rent for a school teacher who will act as sponsor. She'll be full of comprehension of the property's possibilities struck Percy with violence. "It took my maternal interest to see it." She took her head sadly and repeated his own statement. "I'm afraid you don't know much about children, Mr. O'Neil."

With haste Ylena went to work on her shop. She scoured the Indian reservations, went down into Mexico and from there up the west coast, either buying merchandise or taking it on consignment. She had everything from Indian tools to a pair of Hepplewhite chairs; from little clay Mexican figures to a couple of Byzantine Madonnas; from mugs of pottery to hand-blown crystal; from cork kitchen mats to Regency pedestals. She had a $1,500 screen, an old one of delicate water colors in black ink on cream silk. Little carved of alabaster, rock crystal or green jade. Paintings, bronzes, porcelains, Mexican silver, wood carving and tiles. Sample books stuffed to fat proportions with chintz, velvet, brocade, muslin and every imaginable material. She had everything.

Agghast at her own temerity, the girl wondered if she could be the same one who had crept into town, a frightened little mouse, fearing someone might know her. And now, he wanted to be known by everyone who was ready to spend a few dollars or several thousand. That was why she was giving an opening, replete with engraved invitations to the wealthy and the press.

The night before her reception Ylena sat in her bedroom at a desk of blond wood, very similar to Tate Cromwell's, and wrote a letter to Vernon Stone. With the exception of the desk the room was gray and rose. Gray walls, a rose ceiling. Wide-backed chair, the dressing table bench, a chaise longue and the headboard of the bed were of padded rose satin. Lamp shades were of the same color. And the frame about a large painting of Carlyle that Ylena had ordered copied from a photograph, to hang over her bed. There was a great deal of glass—a pair of screens, glass tables, bubble bowls filled with rose-colored flowers.

"Vernon," she wrote, "I've done it. And I'm scared to death. I have everything from dressed-up fleas swinging in gilded walnut shells to YOUR Sheraton desk, so perhaps I'll make out."

Hundred attended her opening. Residents of La Madera; winter visitors in sophisticated sport clothes and Indian jewelry; daring, gawking youngsters; a few of the lonely and hungry persons who crash every opening.

Scott Hamilton came in, clanking, attired in full cowboy regalia, at about four in the afternoon. With him was a short, pudgy brunette girl, dressed in soft white suede jacket and trousers. She wore ruby bracelets on one wrist, diamond ones on the other, was smoking through a silly long cigar holder and commenced shrieking the instant she spied Ylena.

"Hello, Letitia," Ylena said, smiling indulgently.

Letitia ran to toes jeweled-dressed arms about the blond girl, kissed her with a bright, thickly rouged mouth and cried: "It's really you, Ylena. I told Scotty it couldn't possibly be, not my Ylena. But it is, and here you are, dear, as beautiful as ever. I must admit, although it makes my blood boil to say so. Now, darling, you must do a house for me." She began to gesticulate with the lengthy cigar holder. "I want lots of glass, cacti, Spanish grillwork, gourds growing on balconies and guitar players beneath them. I want old broken jugs setting around. You know, darling, corn-grinding rocks and stuff. I want totem poles by the fireplace, no rugs, Indian relics on the walls, lamps made of cactus—get the idea, sweet?" She stopped, breathless.

Scott said, "A sort of glorified tepee, a la Mexico."

"Regardless," Ylena said, "it's an order and I need it. I've been spending money like a drunken sailor and I'm a little weak in the knees from it."

"Oh, that rat of a Vincent!" Letitia exclaimed viciously. "I'd like to tear him limb from limb. Really, Scotty, he's the meanest person in the world and this girl is the sweetest."

"You're telling me!" There was a solemn quality about the man's slangy remark.

Letitia interrupted the portentious quiet with a brisk denial. "Well now, after all, she's not that sweet. So you two stop gazing at each other and pay a little attention to me. I'm still here, you know." She slipped a ruby-laden arm through Scott's. "And I think I'll be here every winter from now on. I like it. I like it very much."

With good-natured sarcasm the blond girl asked, "You wouldn't be thinking of building your house in Copper Creek, would you, Tish, dear?"

"Exactly! Aren't you thrilled, Scotty?"

"Why should I be? I lose a perfectly good customer. You've been at my ranch only two days and you're planning a house—hey, there's Aunt Daisy. When did she get here?"

"Practically at daybreak," Ylena pointed to some packages on top of a gold and black Queen Anne table. "There's her offering—jam, eggs and oranges."

"Groceries on a Queen Anne!" Scott laughed aloud. He watched his aunt hustling about the room, greeting several friends. "Lord, it's Ten to one she press-agents your shop, then winds up with a little plugging for the Northern Ranch."

"That's all right with me. She's certainly been a help. Between her and the society editors I've met everyone. I wish you'd stay until the people leave." Her invitation was for both, but her eyes were on Hamilton.

"Sorry, but I just dropped in to say hello, and wish you luck. I have to drive out to the ranch for a load of citrus and head back to Copper Creek."

"Just think," Letitia squealed, "I'm going to pick oranges right off the trees."

The blond girl's eyes narrowed and she gave her out-of-town friend a quizzical smile. "Seems to me I remember your shrieking over picking oranges right off the trees in Florida."

"Darn it, Ylena!" Letitia replied, not at all offended, "you've the memory of an elephant."

"You'll have to admit you're the type who learns to swim all over again every summer. You'll have to learn to swim, Scotty."

He retorted openly. "She's already pulled everything from a sprained ankle to falling off her horse."

Unabashed, the brunette said, "And I've plenty more angles." Deftly she spurted smoke.

"Stop scaring me," he suggested. "We'd better be going. Take care of yourself, Ylena." He gave her arm a squeeze, then moved listlessly away, greeting a few persons, finally stopping beside his aunt. He put an arm about her and kissed her.

Letitia lingered beside Ylena. "I'm serious about that house. I hate to see you working and worried, darling—now, I took my first ride today." She made a very face and wriggled. "From the way I feel I'm going to spend about a week creaking and groaning. When I'm able to sit down again, I'll have Scott zip me down here and we'll get started. Meanwhile, if you get stuck I'll give you some money."

She started to leave, but leaned closer. Her eyes, however, were on Scott Hamilton. "Got any strings on him?"

GOOD POINTS COMBINED

MANY CONTRACTS depend mainly upon handling some one important feature of the play correctly, but more of them on a combination of sound points. The declarer who has several chances to make mistakes, but avoids each and every pitfall as it is reached, is usually the one who reaps a rich reward in the average tournament, in which he is striving to outplay other people on the same deal.

North's 2-No Trumps was sound enough, in place of 2-Diamonds, in view of those two kings, to make sure that the lead would come up to, not through, his hand if it got played in No Trumps. Perhaps 4-Spades would have been more conservative after hearing the spade rebid, but this identical bidding came at two tables of a duplicate tournament in which the rival Norths were striving for extreme tops. One of them fumbled the ball, but the other ran for a touchdown.

In each case East led the club 4, South playing low and West putting on the Q. Then came the differences. One North took this trick with the K, cashed two high spades and led a third to West, who returned his club 8. Declarer let East hold this with the J, and the club 3 knocked out the A. Seeing only eight immediate tricks—two in clubs, two in diamonds and four in spades—he decided to seek another in diamonds. So he cashed the diamond K and finessed the diamond J to East, who won with the Q, scored two more clubs and his heart A, setting the contract two tricks.

The other declarer let West's club win the first trick and took the return with his club K. He scored two spades and gave a third to West, who had no club left, so returned his heart 2 to the 10 and A. East then knocked out the club A. This declarer then cashed one low spade and the heart K, then led the diamond J toward West. East covered with the Q and the K won. Then came the last spade, the 5, and West was squeaked. He needed his diamond 10-9 to prevent the A-6 from taking two tricks, but he also needed his heart Q to down the dummy's heart J. So this North made 5-No Trumps.

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

While spinach is the most popular vegetable "greens" it does not grow well in hot weather only during the cooler months. Therefore, it is wise to grow Swiss chard for use as "greens" as it can be used continuously.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, the outside leaves are removed to be used for greens and the plant continually sends up dozens of new center shoots throughout the summer until stopped by heavy frosts.

The leaves when the size of spinach are used in the same manner as spinach. Some people prefer to allow the leaves to grow and become larger when the leafy portion is boiled like spinach and the thick fleshy stalks and midribs are prepared like asparagus. Swiss chard can also be canned for winter use.

Keep Some on Hand

For the summer's cold meat platters, boiled tongue is excellent to keep on hand in your refrigerator. Wash tongue, cover with water and cook slowly below the boiling point until tender, about four hours. Remove skin and cool.

Ickes Announces Plans for 1,800 Mile Pipe Line

Immediate Start Planned on $80,000,000 Defense Project

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (AP)—Plans for the longest pipe line in the world, to pump crude oil 1,800 miles from Texas and Louisiana to the New York-Philadelphia area at the rate of 250,000 barrels a day, were announced today by Secretary of the Interior Ickes on behalf of eleven large oil companies.

An immediate start is planned on the $80,000,000 project but its completion will take nine months and Ickes warned that it would not solve the immediate petroleum shortage in the east caused by the diversion of fifty United States tankers to British use.

At the same time Ickes warned that there still was serious danger of a coal shortage due to limited transportation facilities. The transportation situation already was "tight," he said, and a shortage would develop if fall seasonal demand outran supply.

Larger Tanker Tonnage
Meanwhile the Maritime Commission moved to increase the nation's tanker tonnage, opening bids for construction of sixteen small coastal tankers of about 1,830 tons each with a capacity of 12,800 barrels. Nine firms submitted bids.

The pipeline system will be built by a corporation to be organized and owned by the participating companies jointly, to be known as National Defense Pipelines, Inc., along with a smaller corporation, termed Emergency Pipelines, Inc. It will tap existing facilities carrying oil from the Oklahoma-Kansas-Texas-Midcontinent and Illinois areas.

Roosevelt May Act
President Roosevelt is expected to proclaim that the proposed pipe line is necessary for national defense purposes and grant the corporations authority to exercise the right of eminent domain in accordance with new legislation.

National defense pipelines would finance itself without cost to the government by borrowing approximately eighty per cent of the estimated cost of lines and facilities by private placement of notes maturing over a five-year period. The balance would be made up through issuance of junior securities or capital stock which would be purchased by the participating companies on a percentage basis. Emergency pipelines would be financed in the same way.

M. Carter Hall Dies At Clifton Forge

CLIFTON FORGE, Va., Aug. 11 (AP)—M. Carter Hall, 56, general solicitor for the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Nickel Plate and the Pere Marquette railroads, died today in the Chesapeake and Ohio Hospital here where he had been a patient for about a month.

He had engaged in railway legal work since 1907, and was general attorney for the C & O from 1929 until 1938 when he was named general solicitor for the three roads.

His offices were at Richmond, Va., and his home was "Meadowbrook," a country estate in Fairfax county.

He was a member of the University of Virginia board of visitors from 1934 to 1938.

ing, he said "I have nothing to say." Jackson added, however:

Jackson in No Hurry
In the 1938 fight I announced candidly fifteen months before the election and I lost every district in Baltimore City. Later, in the majority election, I carried every district.

"I made my announcement in the gubernatorial primary too soon. Perhaps somebody is now making the mistake which I made then."

Jackson was not at the Ocean City reception. He said he was unable to go there because he attended the funeral of Frank S. Given, Baltimore county Democratic leader who died Thursday.

The reception was held at the cottage of Clarence W. Miles, who managed the governor's last campaign. It was attended by Democratic leaders from nine Eastern Shore counties, Baltimore City and Baltimore and Montgomery counties.

"Of course, there is no announcement that he (O'Connor) would be a candidate to succeed himself next year," said the Baltimore Sun, "but the governor as well as those responsible for creating the occasion tacitly agreed that this was the second term campaign's beginning. The governor commented:

O'Connor's Comment
"There is the matter of Maryland's part in the national defense, the matter of the state roads situation in the light of the action of Congress on the federal appropriation for access roads and strategic highways, and there is conservation."

"All of these things are so much more important that I feel the best thing I can do is to give my attention to them for the rest of my term. And that is what I propose to do."

O'Connor was elected in 1938 on a platform that included a proposed constitutional amendment to prevent a governor of Maryland from seeking two successive terms.

The amendment was voted on in a referendum in 1940 and was rejected 170,581 to 93,124. The amendment's defeat was regarded as leaving O'Connor free to run again if he chooses.

Vast Migrations Because of War Threat to Health of All Races

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A man may start a ranch in Liberia and that act may affect your eyesight. Something like this actually happened when Napoleon's soldiers came home from the Egyptian campaign where they had acquired trachoma, an Egyptian disease through the civilian population of Russia.

A bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company deals with the migrations of people that are going on today all over the world. Why should a life insurance company be interested in the migrations of peoples? Because it affects mortality, which is the business of a life insurance company.

And not just the mortality of the migrating peoples half across the world, but the health of you and me, here and now.

When peace comes to Europe, statesmen will be forced to reckon with millions of people whose hatreds, frustrations and poverty will raise serious problems and make difficult the tasks of the peacemakers.

The figures about these migrations are in themselves staggering. We have not all the figures, but it is likely that nearly a fifth of the living population of the world is more or less completely removed from what was its normal environment in 1935.

In England approximately a million civilians have been removed from heavily bombed areas. There are 2,000,000 strangers, prisoners and civilians, at work in Germany.

Since 1933 permanent migrations have occurred from Germany and its captured countries at the rate of 200,000 a year.

The most striking of these so-called repatriation movements has been the transfer of Germanic people in the Baltic, Polish, Beasarian and Russian areas in 1939 and 1940. This involves at least 400,000 people. When Russia took Finland about 500,000 persons moved out of the territory ceded to Russia.

Totalled Millions
The number streaming from Belgium and Northern France just ahead of the 1939 invasion will never be known, but probably totalled millions.

In unoccupied France the number of refugees is estimated at 2,500,000.

There are at least 1,000,000 refugees in the Balkans from Poland. Whether they went back again in 1940 is a problem over which censorship has drawn a veil.

The figures for China and the Far East are mere guest work. All this means transfer of animal parasites, unfamiliar contagious diseases, starvation and the ravages of nutritional diseases. To say nothing of the effect of intermarriage on the incidence of epilepsy, feebled-mindedness, diabetes, cancer and arterial degeneration and of psychological upheavals.

Feminine Reader—"Will daily washing with brush and soap and massaging with cold cream rid my legs of permanent 'goose pimples'?"

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS
By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Despite new Nazi inroads on the Leningrad front and in the Ukraine, there are increasing indications that Hitler has been compelled by the fury of Russian resistance to revise his whole war plan.

His hopes of smashing the Red army before winter or of breaking Russia's will to continue the battle have waned. If observers in the United States and in London read the signs aright, he is now racing against time to grip the Ukraine solidly, to seize strategic ground in the north midway between the Leningrad and Moscow fronts, and then dig in for the winter.

That, at least, is the construction that can be put on both Berlin and London comments on the battle. It implies that the main German attack toward Moscow via Smolensk has come more or less to a halt. The Russian stand there, according to an eye-witness report from captured and devastated Smolensk, still is balking Nazi hopes of a quick and decisive victory. The rumble of guns eastward of Smolensk was audible to a writer for the Associated Press.

First foreign war correspondent there to visit the city that was.

Berlin Predicts Advance
Berlin predicts that the whole great southern bend of the Dnieper south of Kiev to the Black Sea will soon be in Nazi hands. This prediction may or may not be premature. There can be little doubt, however, that the Germans' failure to break through toward Moscow on a wide front has forced a revision in Nazi war plans. The Ukraine, clear to the Dnieper line has become the prime objective of the Nazis.

Even under the Stalin "scorched earth" policy the Ukraine offers probable subsistence for huge German armies without the enormous strain on transportation involved in winter hauling from Germany or the Balkans. London expresses fear that both Odessa and Nikolaev, 80 miles northeast of the great Russian Black port and at the mouth of the Bug river, are about to be cut off. That would mean that the Germans would have good sea transport facilities from Bulgaria and Rumanian ports to sustain the right flank of their line.

The London comment said progress had been made by two Nazi columns, one from the north and one from the west, pressing toward Odessa and Nikolaev. Presumably the force which last week reached Odessa, south of Kiev and midway between that city and Odessa, is the column moving down from the north. There has been no indication that another Nazi spearhead

Lowe Is Featured In Double Date

Edmund Lowe is one exception to the axiom that a genius is never recognized in his home town. And there are very few of his home folks who deny he is of genius calibre, for he was a college professor at nineteen.

Lowe, who has since become one of the screen's most popular personalities, is currently appearing in the top featured role in Universal's "Double Date" at the Maryland theatre.

Graduated from Santa Clara (California) university at the age of eighteen, the actor was also prominent in athletics. He played first base and captained the varsity baseball team that listed on its roster Artie Schaffer, Harry Wolters and Benny Kauff, all of whom became big league stars.

Obtaining his master of arts degree in theoretical pedagogy, Lowe was appointed to a faculty post at his alma mater, and at the same time began to take an interest in college dramatics. In a short time he gave up his teaching position and joined a Los Angeles stock company, making his professional debut in "The Brat" which later was taken to New York and served as Lowe's introduction to Broadway.

After several successful years on Broadway, appearing opposite such notable actresses as Maude Fulton, Florence Reed and Lenore Ulric, Lowe was lured to try pictures. He was soon one of the top leading men in Hollywood and after several hits won world-wide acclaim for his characterization in "What Price Glory."

Lowe is appropriately cast in "Double Date." He portrays the father of a grown boy who looks upon his romantically-inclined parent as a problem child. Una Merkel, Peggy Moran and Rand Brooks are featured with Lowe in the gay comedy film.

Murphy Prefers Films To Wall Street

George Murphy might have been a broker on Wall Street with a seat on the Exchange—but he thinks he did better. He's a leading man in the motion pictures and, right now, is playing opposite Ginger Rogers in RKO Radio's "Tom, Dick and Harry," a gay romantic comedy in which Alan Marshal and Burgess Meredith essay the other top male roles.

"I get to looking around at those brokers and I see the low quotations on the price of Exchange seats," he explains, "and I'm glad I learned how to do on five hours sleep. And how to live seven days a week. I was just out of college when the father of a classmate called me down to Wall Street. He offered to put up half the money to buy me a seat on the Exchange. But there was a catch in it. I was told I had to learn the brokerage business first—and the place to start was as a runner. For a year I ran from house to house and bank to bank. Trouble was with the salary system. Runners were paid a weekly wage that could only last until Thursday. They all starved Friday and half of Saturday, by which time they were so weak they had no fun on weekends."

"I couldn't see that, so I said 'no thanks' to the Exchange seat and went into show business. I still know a lot of brokers—and I still think I'm right. They had a terrible life these days."

Nolan Has Lead In "Dressed To Kill"

Michael Shayne's efforts to discover a killer and get married at the same time were greeted with applause and laughter at the Strand theatre where "Dressed to Kill" is now playing.

Lloyd Nolan, as Shayne, gives his best performance to date as the detective who tracks down murderers.

A MEMORABLE EVENT

Greer Garson, determined to make the state legislature see her viewpoint as regards legislation for child welfare, refuses to be discouraged by Felix Bressart, playing the humanitarian doctor who aids her in her heroic work of finding homes for foundlings. The scene is from "Blooms in the Dust." The new production, filmed in Technicolor, stars Miss Garson with Walter Pidgeon, and opens Friday on the Maryland screen.

while he exchanges wisecracks with his bride-to-be, blonde Mary Beth Hughes, and a slow-witted inspector of detectives.

Making the final arrangements for his wedding, Shayne is interrupted by a scream. Rushing into a room, he finds two murdered persons.

First he calls a newspaper and gives them the news for $100, and receives a promise of $400 more for an exclusive on the killer. Then he phones Inspector Pierson, played by William Demarest.

But to get the additional $400, Mike must find the murderer himself. How he does this and at the same time takes care of his bride's insistence that they be married at once, makes for a novel, hilarious and exciting climax.

When a millionaire tosses away his yacht to make love to a tenement-bred girl, that's romance! And that is exactly what George Montgomery does in "Accent on Love," which is now at the Strand theatre. George, who is featured with Osa Massen, is unhappy with his life as an executive of a real estate company, so he chucks it all overboard and decides to start anew—by working as a day laborer. He strikes up an acquaintance with J. Carroll Nash, and goes to live with him—because, as Montgomery says, he has nowhere else to go.

Explorer Liked Newspaper Work

One-time reporter and writer of many authoritative articles on Africa, Dr. Paul L. Hoefer, whose new production, "The Leopard Men of Africa," comes to the Embassy theatre tomorrow, attributes much of his success in the field of world-wide exploration to his training on newspapers.

An inherent sense of the dramatic, reflected in the many stirring scenes of Dr. Hoefer's new production, was sharpened by newspaper work, by "legging it" after news in remote corners of big cities, and by long and close contact with the swift tempo of city rooms and rewrite desks.

"Newspaper work," said Dr. Hoefer recently, "has been the training ground for many competent men and women who have made their marks in the motion picture industry, both as writers and directors. In my own case it taught me to 'get the story,' sharpened my nose for news and to strip any given subject of extraneous details and get down to bed rock. This, of course, is essential in telling a story on the screen, especially a story of jungle life in which action plays so vital a part."

Dr. Hoefer is now compiling a had me in a mean mood." Cagney and Carson went off to lunch together.

Film stars Thomas Mitchell and Geraldine Fitzgerald have discovered they have something in common besides their Irish ancestry and their current roles in Warner Brothers' "Flight From Destiny," now at the Garden. They're both connoisseurs of art and collectors of paintings.

Man Drowns, Three Companions Rescued

GRASONVILLE, Md., Aug. 11 (AP)—William Ellis Leibig, 28, of Newmarket, Pa., was drowned and three other members of a Pennsylvania fishing party rescued after clinging to their overturned boat for about twelve hours in the Chester river near Jackson's creek Sunday.

Sheriff E. E. Coursey and state police said Leibig and Adam W. Keith, 29, Adamstown, Pa.; Mahlon Ness, 26, East Earl, Pa.; and Charles Wallace, 55, Newmarket, rented a fishing boat about 5 p. m. Saturday.

The men said a storm came up about 10 p. m. The boat capsized as they started to return to shore. Leibig held on to the boat for three or four hours but finally became exhausted and lost his grip. About 10 a. m. today, the survivors sighted a fishing boat operated by Richard Green of Rock Hall, N. Y. museum.

State Road Work Up to Schedule

BALTIMORE, Aug. 11 (AP)—Major Ezra B. Whitman, chairman of the State Roads Commission, states in a report submitted to Governor O'Connor that construction work on Maryland's highways and bridges was proceeding according to schedule.

Whitman's report covered the three-month period from May 1 to July 31. In it he listed state and county projects totaling $4,995,167.11 which have been let by contract since the period began.

Total state expenditures were $4,609,705.15, while the remaining $385,461.96 covered county work.

The three-month expenditure brought to approximately $7,000,000 put out in contracts by the roads commission since the first of the year, the commissioner said.

Whitman also advised O'Connor that the state already had let contracts for over $500,000 in connection with work to relieve traffic around the Glenn L. Martin plant at Middle River. Additional bids are being advertised for the construction there.

The reason the beach at Daytona Beach, Fla., is hard enough for driving is that the sand grains there have sharp corners, so that the sand forms a hard surface.

The ideal garden soil is a mixture, well-drained loam.

The Six Weeks' Stretch

The next six weeks will see some of the hottest fighting the older league has ever known. It will see the effervescent Dodgers and the scrappy Cardinals clawing away at each other with the Pirates chasing both in one of the finest "late foot" actions baseball has known. Only a few weeks ago all his friends were weeping salty tears over the sombre fate of Frank Frisch and his stumbling Pirates. At which point the Fordham Flash finally worked out the right combination and began peeling the hide off all in sight.

We have been trying to get rival managers and players from other teams to call the turn on the Dodgers and the Cardinals. They still give the Cardinals a lean edge, but they also keep asking: "What about the Pirates? If Frisch had been able to get a better start there wouldn't be a race left."

Three Game Ball Clubs

This N. L. pennant pursuit race or gunning for the gonfalon, is interesting for many reasons. But the main reason is that all three leading teams so far have been dead game against various forms of adversity.

The Cardinals have almost filled three hospitals with wounded athletes, but they have yet to waver. Most of their stars have had everything except amputations. They have had cracked fingers, operations, bad legs, sore arms, the nip and house maid's knee.

But they always get up swinging. They are young, fast, tough and loaded with ambition. They hooked up a Daily Double with Old Man Lou Werneke and a flock of kid pitchers who never think any one can beat them. I can still look back to a March afternoon and evening at St. Petersburg with Buggy Whip Warneke as he kept repeating—while shifting about eight ounces of chewing tobacco from one jaw to another—"Watch our kid pitchers. I'm telling you they've got it."

Same Goes for Dodgers

Billy Southworth was pretty cheery at that time—but not as much so as Leo Durocher and Larry McPhail.

They were going to leave nothing but debris on the field of action. "We've got a fighting club," both told me.

They were right. Their Dodgers blow a four-game lead, hit the soapy chute with a thud—and then come storming back.

MacPhail takes the Kaiser's cigarette case and a few blank checks from his pocket—and asks—"who's loopy now?" The correct answer is—everybody.

In the matter of the Dodgers and the Cardinals—or the Cardinals and the Dodgers—I can't recall where baseball has given the game two more colorful, hustling, hard-fighting outfits.

ALMOST A TWIN KILLING

It looked like a double play when the Brooklyn Dodger's Pee Wee Reese nabbed shortstop Miller of the Boston Braves at second on Moore's roller and whipped to first baseman Camilli to catch pinch-hitter Moore. But the Bostonian beat this peg and the Braves went ahead to beat the Dodgers 8-7 in their own park.

Manager of Tigers Is Not To Blame For Poor Showing

Loss of Greenberg and Form Reversal of Newsum and Gehring Hurts

By WHITNEY MARTIN
NEW YORK, Aug. 11 (AP)—The Special News Service—It is to be hoped that Del Baker took out job insurance after winning the American League pennant last year, as it might be hard to collect in damage suits against the United States Army, Buck Newsom, Charley Gehring and any other persons or organizations sharing the responsibility for Detroit's present spot back there near the alley entrance.

Last year Baker was a miracle man, and a mystery man. Nobody knew much about him. He was that anonymous gent backstage who crawls under the canvas and makes the waves that add realism to the ship scene, and it took a lot of wave-making to make the Tigers look like anything but an old scow in drydock.

We were working with a mixture of wheezy old guys and callow youths, but miraculously enough the wheezy old guys and callow youths had that good year, as Baker himself would say, and he steered them to a pennant.

Trouble in Bunches
Few believed Detroit would be able to repeat this year. Miracles don't come in pairs, and old age was bound to catch up with some of the players. The ban against trading by a champion also added a somber dab to a generally dark picture.

Del started this year with much the same club that finished runner-up in the world series, and the blows began to fall. The army got Hank Greenberg, which reduced the Tigers' growth to a purr.

Dick Bartell's legs began to fold at the wrong places. Charley Gehring's legs and eyes began to go back on him. Rudy York couldn't hit in the style to which he was accustomed. Buck Newsom's victories mostly were conversational.

Baker, apparently, is to blame for all of this, and at late reports there is more than an even chance that he will not be among those present next year, and that a new manager will be hired who will get Greenberg out of the army, put youth back into the legs of Gehring, hit for York and throw for Newsom. Maybe he can speak for himself.

Doesn't Make Sense
Anyway, here's a manager capable enough to pilot to a league championship a team which nobody expected to go anywhere and a year later he isn't judged good enough to pilot a team.

It just doesn't make sense, and if Baker was an ornery, old-tongued, gin-soaked old reprobate it still wouldn't make sense if he had shown himself to be capable in his job. But Baker isn't that sort at all. He's a self-effacing, quiet gent who always looks like he was on his way to church or a wedding. Dapper is the word.

Whatever happens to him, it is hoped that the club owner won't keep him on the hot seat the way Phil Whigley kept Gabby Hartnett, and will say yes or no right quick. Whigley argued with himself, out loud for weeks before the affirmative finally won, although it turned out it was only a reprieve.

From what we have seen of the Tigers, at camp and during the season, they are wading around in harmony, and keeping harmony on a ball club is two-thirds of a pilot's job. Baker knows how to handle players, and he knows the technical side of the game.

It seems he hasn't the knack of getting out there and hitting and pitching for his men, and keeping them out of the army.

Maryland Golfers To Vie for Places

TOWSON, Md., Aug. 11 (AP)—Sixteen Middle Atlantic golfers will tee off at the Country Club of Maryland here tomorrow seeking four sectional qualifying places for the National Amateur Championship to be played at the Omaha Field Club Aug. 25-30.

Listed as favorites in the one-day thirty-six hole test, which will be determined on medal scores, are Robert W. Brownell of the Manor Country Club, Norbeck, Md., Maryland State open champion; Otto Greiner of the Country Club of Maryland, runner-up Sunday in the Anderson Memorial at Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Ralph Bogart, Washington star from the Chevy Chase, Md., Country Club.

Eighteen holes will be played in the morning and eighteen in the afternoon.

Gets Ace in Hole-In-One Tourney

BAYSIDE, N. Y., Aug. 11 (AP)—Oscar Goess, twenty-five-year-old tobacco company employee pitched a hole-in-one in the World-Telegram's hole-in-one tournament yesterday.

Using a No. 7 iron, Goess dropped the second of five shots. It went two feet over the pin but there was so much backspin on the ball it reversed into the cup.

Football Talk Begins All over The Country

Wade Calls Running Forward Pass the Greatest Play in Game

By LAWRENCE PERRY

NEW YORK, Aug. 11—As sure as the Hibiscus, the Philox, Zinnias and other hard flowers come into bloom in August gardens so, long about this time, football talk begins to waft from the pines of Maine to fringed Florida, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Hard at work at his Duke summer coaching school, Wallace Wade takes time out to name the best play in football. "The running forward pass is potentially the greatest by all odds," he says. Wonder if he says this more emphatically because he once had a player named George McAfee who did tremendously effective spiraling of the ball upon the dead run.

Tad Wieman, Princeton's coach, holding forth at the William and Mary school, takes issue with Clark Shaughnessy's discounting of blockers on a team that uses the "T" formation and at the same time is blessed with fast running backs.

"Since," says Tad, "there are ten blockers upon an eleven and only one ball carrier, obviously blocking is ten times more important than running." This is in Tad's best pedagogical vein and sounds so good why not let it stand? More long runs are made by a back reversing his field than any other way, Tad says. Red Grange made most of his long runs this way. Pumbling even once in a game, when your opponent recovers the ball, Tad also said, is equivalent to the loss of eighty yards not to mention loss of morale of one team and boost of morale in the other.

Los Angeles Ambitions
Down in Los Angeles some wealthy football enthusiasts are trying to stage a pre-season contest between the Washington Redskins and the New York Yankees. Sammy Baugh versus John Kimbrough! It looks like a natural. George Marshall is reported as willing—at least willing to discuss the test.

Slip Madigan, late coach of St. Mary's and now managing the Golden Gate race track in California, says that coaches are too panicky about the "T" formation or else too prone to think it is the last word in offense. "The T" at last, it is old-fashioned when you come down to it and the defense against it is also old-fashioned—but just as effective as it always was. A seven man line and a box backfield is the answer," he says.

What do you want a safety man for? Give 'em a seven man line and so cut off all those nice blocking angles for quick opening speed plays. Put the box behind and forget the safety man. Not a single team used a seven-box against Stanford last year. That is why Stanford won."

Set-Up Games Dangerous
"Pushover games at the opening of a season," says Harry Mehre of Mississippi, "do a football team more harm than good. Say your team beats Slawish 50-0 in the first game. What does it tell a coach about weaknesses in his outfit? How long does it take him to get his players down to earth, making them realize they are not world-beaters? Not very long. Only until some really good eleven comes along in the second or third game."

Sharpshooting
Kentucky's fine quarterback Junior Jones, now in the army, was at machine gun practice on Hooker mountain, Fort Knox when he was all set with his gun the instructor said: "You're in No. 29. Shoot only at No. 29." Jones blazed away and when the instructor came up he

Frisch Refuses To Admit Defeat Of His Pirates

Fordham Flash Still Thinks Pittsburgh Has Chance To Win

By HAROLD CLASSEN
ST. LOUIS, Aug. 11 (AP)—Bola the beat and Frank Frisch's words melted the ice in the bucket in which he was soaking an injured foot.

"How do I feel? How do you expect me to feel? I got a bum foot, the Pirates are shut out in Chicago and we lose two here," he fumed.

Reminded that his club had come from nowhere in the past month to make it almost a three-team race with St. Louis and Brooklyn for the National League lead Frank admitted reluctantly that all things weren't bad.

But before he started to praise Al Lopez, Pittsburgh captain, for being one of the vital factors in the Pirate drive, he snapped:

"Why don't you give put another column in the box scores showing how many runners a batter leaves on the base?"

"You praise a ball player for knocking in a run. If you checked the figures you would find that some of the better ones left 300 stranded."

Frisch and his coaches credit Lopez with stabilizing and making winners of pitchers Max Baer, Truett Sewell, Ken Heintzelman and John Lanning. "And everyone we use Lloyd Dietz he has done swell too."

Frisch, whose team doesn't have another chance to cut down the Cards and Dodgers lead until Wednesday night was bathing a swollen foot injured in his playing days and which recently was bruised.

The pain kept him in the dugout throughout the Cards series but he tossed playing equipment and towels onto the field at intervals to keep the umpire informed of his presence and displeasure.

He figures the Pirates have a chance for the National League pennant but admits the job will be a tough one.

"The Cards have a good team and the schedule favors Brooklyn. The Dodgers have about twenty games left with Boston and Philadelphia—I said about twenty games with Boston and Philadelphia. And you ask me how I feel?"

Had To Hit 'Em
PITTSBURGH—Dena Gains, 1940 National League batting champion, hit safely in eight consecutive pinch appearances before Manager Frankie Frisch restored him to the regular Pirate lineup.

Vandegrift Signs Agreement, Ends A.F. of L. Strikes

Memorial Hospital and Other Jobs, Will Be Resumed at Once

Four construction jobs, including the Memorial hospital addition, struck on Thursday, July 31, were given the green light last evening when John I. Vandegrift, local contractor, agreed to recognize the Building and Construction Trades Council of Cumberland and vicinity as the spokesman of the workers in the industry and representative of the respective trades taken collectively or individually.

The blanket agreement was entered into at 5 p. m. between Vandegrift and E. Patrick Allender, president of the Building and Construction Trades Council.

The strike of A. F. of L. workers occurred when Vandegrift offered to sign an agreement to cover carpenters, laborers and iron workers on his job but would not sign the blanket agreement for all classes of construction workers such as electricians, truck drivers, plumbers and shovel men, Allender said.

Celanese Job Included

Jobs struck in addition to the hospital were two residences and a small construction project at the Celanese plant for which Vandegrift had contracts. The fifth job struck has since been transferred to another local contractor.

Under the blanket contract signed yesterday with the A. F. of L. affiliate, Vandegrift agrees to employ none but members affiliated with the Building and Construction Trades Council on all work required by the employer in the jurisdiction of the council.

The employer further agrees to provide in their specifications when doing any business with sub-contractors, that such sub-contractors will use none other than members of the respective unions affiliated with the Building and Construction Trades Council.

Vandegrift also agrees to abide by all working conditions as recognized by the respective trades affiliated with the council and to comply with the rates of wages and the specified hours as recognized by the respective trades.

Matter of Disputes

The agreement also states that if at any time a dispute should arise between both parties to the agreement as to the interpretation of any part of the agreement, before any strike or lockout is declared, the matter of dispute shall be referred at once to a committee of two men from each side to meet and try and reach an understanding and settlement in the dispute. The agreement, which went into effect yesterday, shall remain in force and effect until May 1, 1942, and shall continue from year to year unless either party expresses a desire for a change, thirty days prior to the annual termination date. Signatures appearing on the agreement are those of Allender and Vandegrift with Edgar Vandegrift as witness.

The Free State will be represented by Gov. Herbert R. O'Connor and members of his official family, while the Smoky City expects to send a delegation of about 100, headed by C. C. Kellenberg, chief backer of the Variety club, and Elmer Ecker, president of the Dapper Dan club. Mayor Richard Sweeney is slated to lead a motorcade of twenty-five automobiles here from Hagerstown, accompanied by a police escort, and Connellsville, Pa., is also to be well represented.

Mute Negro Given Year in Prison

Donald E. Smith Violated Parole from Circuit Court

Donald E. Smith, 20-year-old mute negro, was sentenced to a year in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday in trial magistrate's court after he was found guilty of driving a car without a license and unauthorized use of a vehicle.

Smith was given the sentence after a checkup revealed he was paroled several months ago in circuit court on a charge involving the slugging of a Wineow street service station attendant.

He was arrested by Lieut. James E. Van after a chase from Baltimore street up Washington street to Green street. Van alleged Smith in a high-powered car which had been reported stolen from the rear of the Port Cumberland hotel and the chase then ensued.

Captains Hope To Attain Quota of 136 for Two Units This Week

One hundred and nine men have enlisted for the two local companies of the Maryland State Guard since application blanks were issued a week ago, it was announced yesterday by Capt. Thomas P. Conlon and Richard P. Shireman.

Efforts will be made to enlist sixty-eight men for each company. Conlon said. This means that there are openings for twenty-seven more men and at the rate enlistments are being made the goal of 136 is expected to be reached within the next few days. Each company will include a captain, two lieutenants and medical officer in addition to the sixty-eight enlisted men.

Cumberland is making much better headway enlisting men than other sections of the state according to a statement made yesterday by Brig. Gen. Dwight H. Mohr, state commander. Mohr said that 600 volunteers are needed to bring the Baltimore units up to their authorized strength. He added that 400 vacancies exist in the troops at the Fifth Regiment Armory, 100 at the One Hundred and Fourth Medical Regiment Armory and 100 at the Pikeville and Towson armories.

Rifles On Their Way

Mohr stated that 2,000 army rifles are now on their way to Baltimore to arm the men of the newly formed state guard. The rifles, the majority of which are the old Springfield model used in the World War, are being furnished by the federal government and are enroute to Baltimore from an army arsenal for distribution throughout the state.

Uniforms for the state guard, which was organized to replace the national guard while it is in federal service, will arrive in Baltimore within the next two weeks, Mohr said. The uniforms are similar to those of the regular army except for identifying shoulder insignia.

Heavy Taxes Cut Celanese Profits

A report issued in New York yesterday shows that the consolidated net profit of the Celanese Corporation of America for first six months of 1941 was $3,149,921 after federal income and excess profits taxes at existing rates and setting aside a reserve of $478,397 for anticipated increase in taxes under pending bill.

The profit is equivalent to $1.66 per common share compared with profit of $3.426,480, or $1.88 per common share in same period in 1940.

Dr. Camille Dreyfus, president of the corporation, reported "business continues at record levels with demand in excess of increasing productive capacity."

For twelve months ending June 30, 1941 the net profit amounted to $5,182,024 compared to $7,868,907 in twelve months period ending June 30, 1940.

VICTIMS OF GAS CURFEW—Three men from Martinsburg, W. Va., were caught in the embarrassing position of being out of gas after Cumberland stations closed at 7 p. m. Luckily they had parked their car behind the News office and met an old friend of theirs who had worked in Martinsburg. Using a glass jar and hose they siphoned enough gas from his car to enable them to reach home. From left to right are Woody Milburn, Americus Qualini, and John Piccolomini, all of Martinsburg, W. Va., and Lee Johnson, News printer, who had worked in Martinsburg and who is originally from Florida. The Martinsburg men had been here to play the "ponies" at Fairgrove when their tank went dry. Johnson still had enough gas in his car to drive home after the "milking" process.

Free Press Gives Confidence, V.F.W. Speaker Declares

W. L. McKenzie Relates Story of Peter Zenger in Public Address

A free press is one of the surest indications of a nation's status and 200 years of a free press in America have given us great confidence in our newspapers, William L. McKenzie, of Henry Hart Post No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars, told a radio audience last evening, in "Speak Up for Democracy" program, broadcast over station WTBO.

"What Peter Zenger stood for 200 years ago, the American press and the radio industry stand for today," declared McKenzie. "Because we have been privileged to read and hear both sides of every controversial question that has ever stirred America, we have become a people of independent convictions, free from the narrow minded prejudices of those who are mentally undernourished."

Speaking of the world's men of letters, McKenzie recalled the case in 1735 of Peter Zenger, who was placed on trial, charged with seditious libel, because he dared print the truth about a petty tyrant in his "New York Weekly Journal."

Dictated in Jail

During his nine months in jail Zenger continued to publish his paper by dictating editorials through a dungeon hole to his wife and servants. "It is the great design of this paper," he said, "to maintain and explain the glorious principles of liberty and to expose the art of those who would darken and destroy them."

Alexander Hamilton, the greatest lawyer in the colonies, bent with the weight of almost eighty years, came from Philadelphia to New York to plead for Zenger—and for the right of men to tell the truth in print.

Turning to the jury Hamilton said: "The question before you is not a small or private concern. It is not the cause of a poor printer who is trying. The result of this trial may affect every free man in America."

Red Cross To Present First Aid Certificates To 50 on August 28

Approximately fifty persons will receive standard, advanced and junior Red Cross first aid certificates at a meeting arranged by Allegany County Chapter of the Red Cross for Thursday, August 28, at 8 p. m. in the city hall council chamber.

Mrs. Lee W. Witherup, chairman of Allegany chapter, will present certificates to members of the graduating class of the Allegany Hospital School of Nursing, the Woman's Sport Club, American Legion auxiliary, Girl Scout Troop No. 15 and ten members of the advanced first aid class.

Karl G. Perry, chairman of first aid, will preside at the meeting, at which members of the local Red Cross board will be present.

Recently a leading merchant of Washington, D. C., suggested that cotton mesh and lisle stocking should be worn "as a badge of service" since the order from the Office of Production Management, "freezing" 53,000 bales of raw silk for defense needs.

Prattie crowds around the hosiery counters in large cities of the country as well as in Cumberland stores is a sad commentary on the vanity of human nature. Women of other lands have faced the loss of loved ones, bombing of homes, cold without fuel and lack of sufficient food for satisfying bodily needs with greater equanimity than many American women are facing restriction on the manufacture of sheer stockings.

On Saturday and Monday before the races began here, Christmas-like rushes reported by local merchants, selling hosiery. They say, however, that since the races began, the "ponies" seemed to have held more allure for the ladies of Cumberland and its vicinity than the dictates of fashion.

Following the first rush most of the stores here limited the number of pairs to a customer, but some are not limiting the number provided the amount desired is reasonable. The largest number of pairs sold to a single customer by any local store (so far as Chatter could ascertain) was twenty-four. A request for thirty-six pairs was made after the limit was placed on the number of pairs sold.

Local merchants reported that if the first rush continued no stock could last long but they said after the races are over this week and Cumberland is back to normal (to some extent anyhow) they will be in a better position to judge how long their stocks will last.

Chatter learned that although stocks are somewhat depleted and in many cases new shipments have not arrived, there is still plentiful supplies of hosiery in local stores.

An industry committee is now in conference with the OPM and until the conference is concluded and a nation-wide inventory completed, clarification of the unusual situation cannot be looked for and industry cannot be expected to know the silk future until later this week.

The writer was told that the silk in process of manufacture (bales unbundled) at the time of the freezing will be completed and allocated to the dealers throughout the country.

Bruce Says 31-Day Dry Spell Is Overtaking Line from Lake

The Celanese plant was furnished nearly as much water by the City of Cumberland in July as the average consumption in Hagerstown during a normal year, it was revealed yesterday by Charles J. Bruce, water superintendent, in stressing the urgent need of a new water line from the Lake Gordon filtration plant to the city.

In pointing out the fact that the present line is not big enough to supply the increasing demands, Bruce stated that during the month of July the Celanese plant alone was supplied with as much water as used by the City of Altoona, Pa., five years ago.

Weather Not Unusual

In spite of the fact that rain hasn't fallen here for twelve consecutive days, precipitation in Cumberland has been only .32 inches for the past thirty-one days, and average ninety degree temperatures have scorched lawns and vegetation, Bruce said there is nothing unusual about the weather for this time of the year.

Bruce declared that there is plenty of water available for the City of Cumberland but the steadily increasing demands by industrial plants and the use of sprinklers during the prolonged dry spell is overtaxing the capacity of the lines bringing the water into the city. In other words, the city is unable to pump water into the reservoirs fast enough to supply the demands of its many consumers.

While Cumberland hasn't enjoyed a good rain since the first week in July when Juke Pluvius flooded the downtown section, eleven inches of rain was recorded in the Lake Gordon area in the months of June and July, Bruce said.

Good Rain Needed

The last rainfall in Cumberland was recorded July 30 when the precipitation was .05 inches. Between July 12 and 30 a total of .32 inches of rain fell here and since the latter date it has been as dry as the Sahara. The heaviest rainfall of the year was recorded in Cumberland from July 1 to 7 when 4.62 inches was reported at city hall.

Bruce admitted that a good rain in Cumberland would help relieve a great deal of pressure on the line to Lake Gordon as it would eliminate the use of sprinklers which are using up a considerable amount of water during the dry period.

Drivers Are Tried On Minor Charges

Several motorists were tried yesterday in trial magistrates' court for minor violations of state motor laws. Nathan F. Beal of Burtonsville, Md., was fined $5 and costs for operating a car without lights. He was arrested July 27 on Route 40 in LaVale by Trooper P. M. Shelton.

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew gave Charles E. Darr, of Route 3, Valley road, a suspended fine of $25 and costs for failing to stop after an accident because Darr is the father of a large family and damage to the machine of G. E. Storer which Darr struck were slight. Darr was found not guilty of turning off his lights to avoid arrest by Sgt. Charles W. Magaha.

Maurice B. Early, of 733 Maryland avenue, forfeited bond of $5.75 for exceeding thirty miles an hour on Route 220, Bowling Green. Three charges against Charles D. McElfish, RFD 3, were dismissed. He was arrested on the Valley road by Trooper W. R. Caldwell and charged with failing to render assistance, failing to identify self and passing a car while the way ahead was not clear.

A hearing on the application of Aimeida Milkowski for a Class D light beer license, for premises on Oldtown road, near the Port Cumberland golf course, will be held in circuit court Saturday, it was announced yesterday.

Filing of the application for the license June 11 was followed two days later by submission of a remonstrance against its issuance, signed by nearly eighty residents of the neighborhood. Heading the list of objectors were the names of two ministers, the Rev. James A. Richards and the Rev. Edward B. Lewis.

National Defense To Be Subject of O'Connor's Talk

Governor To Make Radio Address Tonight after Attending Races

"Maryland's Participation in National Defense" will be the subject of an address to be delivered by Gov. Herbert R. O'Connor over Radio Station WTBO at 6:45 o'clock this evening.

The state's chief executive, here to attend the Cumberland fair and races, will also speak at the weekly luncheon-meeting of the Rotary club at the Port Cumberland hotel at 12:15.

At the track, Governor O'Connor will present trophies to the owners and jockeys of the winning horse in the Port Cumberland Hotel Handicap and will probably speak briefly.

In the evening, at 9:30 o'clock the governor and Mrs. O'Connor will be guests at a dance to be given at the Cumberland Country Club by Attorney General and Mrs. William C. Walsh.

The gubernatorial party will include Francis A. Petrot, of Frederick, state adjutant general and former secretary of state, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. A. Rogan, of Baltimore.

Permit Denied For Garbage Truck Garage

Protests of Bedford Street Residents Upheld by City Council

The mayor and city council yesterday voted unanimously to refuse the application of E. A. Dougherty, city garbage collector, for a permit to construct a truck garage and apartment building in the 1300-block of Bedford street.

Protesting property owners of the neighborhood, represented by F. Brooke Whiting, attorney, said they had no objection to the apartment building but contended that a garage for garbage trucks would be offensive, unsanitary and certain to cause depreciation of property values. They asked rejection of the application.

No Menace to Health

Dr. Theodore R. Shrop, acting city health officer, said the proposed garage would not be unsanitary or a menace to health because the owner would be compelled to observe health department regulations. Mr. Dougherty said there would be no more flies in the garbage truck garage than there are "right here now in the city hall."

Mayor Irvine recalled the establishment of the city incinerator in what was then a sparsely settled area beyond the Lindenville section, and reminded the council that it has been a source of increasing complaint as the city has built up in that direction.

"The present tendency," said the mayor, "is to keep all such buildings, likely to have a nuisance value outside residential sections, and I agree with that view."

City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett called attention to the peculiar problem presented by the Dougherty application, because of the few who actually reside within 150 feet of the proposed garage. He said, however, that he felt a sympathetic attitude should be shown towards residents of the area whose properties might be affected by the near location of a garbage truck garage.

Complain of Storm Sewers

Residents of Blackinton avenue, Maplele section, filed complaint about the city's failure to extend the storm sewer there. Request was made that it be extended at least 200 feet. As now built, the property owners say, it constitutes an unsanitary condition and is unsafe.

Complaint about the storm sewer at South Allegany street and Patterson avenue was made by T. A. Carascaden. As it is now, Carascaden states, it is causing damage to the foundation of his home, 211 South Allegany street.

C. A. Shuster, 703 Virginia avenue, applied for a permit to operate an athletic club for men and boys. The application was referred to Police Commissioner James Orr.

There were 120 deaths and 51 births here last month, and the first case of diphtheria since 1939, according to a report submitted by Dr. Theodore R. Shrop, acting city health officer.

Receipts last month were $265,700.47 and disbursements $186,069.05, according to Finance Commissioner Thomas F. Conlon.

Issuance of Beer License Opposed; Hearing Slated

A hearing on the application of Aimeida Milkowski for a Class D light beer license, for premises on Oldtown road, near the Port Cumberland golf course, will be held in circuit court Saturday, it was announced yesterday.

Filing of the application for the license June 11 was followed two days later by submission of a remonstrance against its issuance, signed by nearly eighty residents of the neighborhood. Heading the list of objectors were the names of two ministers, the Rev. James A. Richards and the Rev. Edward B. Lewis.

Mrs. Byron, Dr. Byrd To Address Kiwanis

A "double feature" is scheduled at the weekly luncheon-meeting of the Kiwanis club Thursday at the Port Cumberland hotel, according to Clarence Lippel, program chairman. Mrs. Katherine E. Byron, Maryland's first congresswoman, who represents the Sixth district, will be the principal speaker, and Dr. H. C. "Curly" Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, is also scheduled to make a short talk if he is able to be present.

The attendance contest, in the nature of a war between Windeggaba and Bullwagia, will continue.

Gas Hoarding Creates Hazard, Hoenicka Warns

Proposed Ordinance To Regulate Gasoline Storage Here Is Read

Gasoline hoarding occasioned by the curfew on sales between 7 p. m. and 7 a. m. and the threat of eventual rationing of the fuel has created a serious fire hazard, Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka reported to the mayor and city council yesterday.

Chief Hoenicka's warning was sounded after the first reading of a proposed ordinance to regulate the location and type of structure of gasoline stations and the storage, sale and transportation of gasoline within the city limits.

The chief said that many persons are storing gasoline in their homes to provide a reserve supply if they should need fuel after the 7 p. m. curfew and to guard against a shortage should rationing become effective. It is becoming a common practice, he reported, for motorists to fill up the tanks of their cars and then siphon the fuel into bottles, jugs, cans and other containers for storage in their homes or garages.

Regulation Is Sought

A serious fire and explosion hazard is created by this practice, Hoenicka went on, explaining that one careless act in a home or garage may result in severe personal injury, or even death, as well as property damage.

The city has no authority at present to invade homes to check on unsafe gasoline storage, and some regulation is sought in order to minimize the dangers created by this latest hoarding practice.

City Finance Commissioner Thomas P. Conlon pointed out that fire insurance regulations limit the quantity of gasoline, kerosene, benzene and other such oil derivatives that may be kept in a house and warned that home owners may endanger their insurance protection by keeping too much of such fuels on hand. Special permits are required by most insurance companies for storage of gasoline, he added.

Condon Issues Warning

Conlon was emphatic in urging that warning be sounded on the dangers of the home storage of gasoline.

The newly-introduced ordinance governing gasoline stations in Cumberland is a comprehensive measure designed to impose greater controls of the business in the interest of safety. The eight-page document repeals all previous ordinances in conflict with it.

Among its numerous provisions are the following: Written consent for opening a new station must be secured from owners of all improved property within 150 feet of the proposed location and there must be reports on the application from the city engineer, the chief of police and the fire chief.

Must Conform to Standards

No storage tanks in future retail stations may have a greater capacity than 8,000 gallons, and all tanks and pumps must conform to standards fixed by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Other regulations concern the manner of dispensing gasoline, the kind of truck in which it may be hauled, the hours during which such vehicles may traverse the central business district, bulk storage construction methods and private storage restrictions.

The ordinance was ordered tabled for two weeks, and interested persons may see copies at city hall.

Union Granted Handball Permit

By a four-to-one vote, city council yesterday granted the Western Maryland Industrial Union council a permit to distribute handbills and operate a sound truck to advertise the Labor Day celebration to be held here September 1 under CIO auspices.

Mayor Harry Irvine cast the lone dissenting vote, objecting to granting of the handbill permit and moving that only the sound truck privilege be granted. His action was lost for want of a second, and Commissioner Thomas F. Conlon then moved that a permit be granted for both activities. It was carried four to one.

The request had been made by Mel Pliske, member of the executive board of the CIO council.

Local Newspaper Employees Win in Picture Contest

Charles B. Hornbrook and Leo Leasure Annex Four of Five Prizes

Two employees of the Cumberland Times and Allegany Companies romped off with eighty per cent of the prizes last evening in the monthly contest of the Cumberland Miniature Camera Club at the home of Edgar D. Growden, Hazen road.

Charles B. Hornbrook won the top prize with his print entitled, "They Can't Do That to Me"—a photograph of his young son walking along a road with a bundle on a stick swung over his shoulder.

Hornbrook also captured the second award with "Headin' Home"—a picture of horses coming into the home stretch in a race at Fairgrove last week.

Leasure Scores Twice

Leo Leasure took third and fifth prizes with "Their Most Sacred Heritage" and "A Mountain Dream" respectively, while O. C. Dean kept the newspaper workers from making a clean sweep by annexing fourth honors with "The Praying Mantle."

Judges for the contest were Mrs. Edward Finnan, Mrs. William Weatherholt and Edgar D. Growden. West C. Fuller, of Ann Arbor, Mich., representative of the Argus Camera Manufacturing Company, was the guest speaker and told members of the club that they "have to pinch pennies to fool with their hobby after August 15." He stated that after that date the prices of photographic supplies will be increased from twenty to twenty-five per cent.

Seventy-five natural color slides of pictures taken by Leo Leasure during his recent western trip were shown and were highly praised by those present.
